Situation Termed 'Very Serious'; Reds Push Back Troops Driving Near Border

SEOUL (Thursday), Nov. 2 (AP).—Strong tank-led Communist forces heavily attacked Allied troops in Northwestern Korea Wednesday night and a United States First Corps spokesman said one American regiment was surrounded.

The spokesman said the situation was "very serious."

Red infantry columns, paced by tanks and supported by artillery and mortar fire, struck savagely on the east flank of a United States armored spearhead which had thrust west 13 miles to within 19 miles of the Manchurian border.

The enemy blows rained down on United States First Cavalry and South Korean forces in the Unsan area, about 30 miles east of one of two Twenty-fourth Infantry Divisions columns pounding for the border.

The situation was "too vague" and "too confused" to say exactly how far various United Nations forces were forced back, the spokesman said.

He reported that other units of the First Cavalry Division were trying to rescue the surrounded regiment which was in the Unsan area of northwestern Korea about 55 air miles from the Manchurian frontier.

The spokesman admitted for the first time that "Chinese troops" are attacking U. N. forces in this area, but added:

"We do not know whether they represent the Chinese (Communist) government."

First Corps officers said they were "not sure whether Chinese troops form the bulk of enemy forces which have thrown the United Nations off balance for the moment."

So close was the fighting that the First Cavalry Division lost several mortars, which the Reds turned on the Americans. The spokesman said the South Ko-

Laborers' Union Reinstates Thomas By Eight Votes

Henry Thomas, who was suspended as president of AFL Laborers Local 74 here on charges of Communist affiliations, last night was reinstated by a margin of eight votes.

Thomas had been found guilty by a union trial board two weeks ago and suspended from office by the union's executive committee, subject to refutation of the charges.

The reinstatement required a two-thirds vote of those present at the membership meeting, held last night at Laborers Hall, 523 New Jersey ave. nw.

Last night's action will mean that Tom Sampler, secretary treasurer of the local and chief accuser against Thomas, will go on trial on charges of injuring the union by his accusations. Trial date has been set as November 6.

AYOT ST. LAWRENCE, England (Thursday), Nov. 2 (AP).—George Bernard Shaw died this morning.

The 94-year-old playwright's life flickered away at 5:05 a. m. (12:05 a. m., EST).

The end came in his cottage on the outskirts of this tiny village of 110 population, where he had lain unconscious for a day.

Acheson to Ask Funds to Aid Yugoslavia

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson announced yesterday that Congress will be asked for funds for the major part of the help this country wants to give to drought-stricken Yugoslavia.

Meantime, Acheson said, President Truman has already approved a stop-gap program to rush food and other supplies in advance of congressional action.

The immediate program, it was learned from other officials, calls for about 35 million dollars to purchase 400,000 tons of food and transport it to Yugoslavia.

Presumably Congress will be asked to approve another 60 million dollars of help, for later this fall and winter. Acheson said the intent was to cover Yugoslavia's entire needs resulting from its record drought. These have been

Moch Insists France Can Never Accept German Divisions In Defense Forces

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

France's Defense Minister Jules Moch declared last night that his country never can accept the creation of German divisions and disclosed previously withheld information on the planned buildup of Western European land forces.

It adds up to a 20-division Army the North Atlantic Treaty Organization aims to have opposing Communist aggression in western Europe by the first of next year, an expansion to 30 divisions by 1952 and to 40 by December, 1953. That is exclusive of German contributions and whatever is provided for the defense of the Mediterranean and northern European areas by the Allies.

Outlining the French side of the dispute, which ended the NATO defense ministers' conference Tuesday without real result, Moch insisted his government's plan is militarily practicable. He declared it will not delay the quick formation of the western European armed force desired by all.

The bespectacled Frenchman's strong insistence on his government's position contrasted with Secretary of State Dean Acheson's summation of the situation at a press conference earlier in the day.

Acheson Voices Confidence

Acheson expressed confidence that full agreement could be reached on the use of German troops in a unified Western Army and optimistically predicted that the disagreement was just one of those things that have to be worked out.

In a long impromptu statement, the American Secretary of State said that perhaps some way can be found to put the American and French military plans together. Our military chiefs insist that creation of divisions of mixed nationalities as France's "Pleven Plan" envisages cannot work on the battlefield.

Thus, if Moch's statement is what observers felt it was—an answer to Acheson and American reaction to the NATO conference—it would appear that the committees named to adjust differences between the French and American positions have a job ahead.

The Frenchman was most specific about the question of inclusion of German divisions in the western European force. Should such units be created, he

Plotters Felled By Blazing Guns At Blair House; Third Man Held

BULLETIN

NEW YORK (Thursday), Nov. 2 (U.P.)—Rosa Collazo, 40, wife of one of the two men who attempted to kill Prisident Truman, was arraigned early today on a charge of "conspiracy to injure" the President. Arrainged before U. S. Commissioner Edward W. McDonald she was held in $50,000 bail.

Two Puerto Rican Nationalist revolutionaries made an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate President Truman at Blair House yesterday.

In a wild exchange of blazing guns which broke the early afternoon Indian Summer calm, one of the men was killed and the other wounded by White House policemen.

Before they fell, the assassins fatally wounded one of the guards and wounded two others, one of them critically. Twenty-nine shots were fired, 14 by the assassins.

The dead White House policeman was Leslie Coffelt, shot in the chest and stomach.

Wounded were:

Donald T. Birdzell, uniformed guard, bullet wounds in each leg; in fair condition and expected to recover.

Joseph H. Downs, guard in plainclothes, bullet wound in the chest, abdomen and head; in critical condition.

Coffelt, 40, lived at 1915 N. Wayne st., Arlington. Birdzell, 42, lives at 4937 New Hampshire ave. nw. Downs, 44, lives at 10620 S. Dunmoor dr., Silver Spring.

Mr. Truman was inside Blair House at the time—about 2:15 p. m.—preparing to go to Arlington Cemetery to dedicate a monument. He heard the shots and peered out a window only to be waved back frantically by guards. No shots were fired at him. Half an hour later he slipped out the back door to attend the ceremony, just about on schedule.

Secret Service Chief U. E. Baughman told reporters one of the Puerto Ricans from his hospital bed told a Secret Service agent:

"We came here with the express purpose of shooting the President."

The man is Oscar Collazo, 37, of 173 Brook ave., the Bronx, New York. He was shot in the chest and is expected to live. Like all the wounded, he was taken to Emergency Hospital, only a block from the shooting scene. He fell at the foot of the Blair House steps, his shirtfront clotted with blood.

Collazo also said the two assassins got together in New York on Monday and decided on the plan to kill Mr. Truman. They came to Washington on Tuesday. They also hoped to start a revolution in this country, Baughman quoted Collazo as saying.

At 9:30 last night Metropolitan Police formally lodged a murder charge against Collazo. Earlier

Nationalist Leader Seized in Brooklyn

Washington police reported last night that Francisco Alonso, a Puerto Rico Nationalist party leader, was arrested by the FBI in Brooklyn, N. Y., at their request. According to police, a man answering his description was turned away last summer when he attempted to see Mrs. Truman. Alonso was held for investigation.

Yesterday's 85 Hottest Recorded For November

Yesterday was the hottest November day on record.

The Weather Bureau said the high of 85 registered at 12:54 p. m. was hotter than at any other time in November in its history.

Previous high for November 1 was in 1882, when the temperature went up to 79 degrees.

Today, there will be more of the same, a high of 83 and a fair morning. Clouds are due for the afternoon.

The weatherman expects the tepid weather to continue Friday but predicts more seasonal weather for the weekend. No very cold weather is in sight, it was said.

500,000 Hear Pope Proclaim The Virgin Mary's Assumption

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 1 (AP). The ancient Roman Catholic belief that the Virgin Mary was taken into heaven in body as well as in spirit became today an article of the church's creed by proclamation of Pope Pius XII in a spectacular ceremony.

A multitude regarded here as the greatest assembly of its kind since the start of Christendom prayed and cheered under the eyes of the Pope in St. Peter's square. Vatican sources estimated the crowd numbered more than 500,000. Church bells pealed throughout Rome. At dusk, floodlights bathed the great square and St. Peter's Basilica.

As night came on, around the world, Catholics lit up their churches and homes in rejoicing. Millions of lights flamed. This All Saints Day—a day in which all saints are remembered—had witnessed the crowning event of the Catholic 1950 Holy Year Jubilee. It will go down in history as the Jubilee of the Assumption.

From the moment of the proclamation of the dogma, or doctrine, of the assumption of Mary, the Mother of Jesus Christ, all the 425 million communicants of the church were required to accept the belief or risk exposure to one sin of heresy.

As the rites progressed, other ceremonies were held throughout the world in cathedrals, churches and even in missionary huts in jungle clearings. The celebration with lights had been suggested to bishops by the Holy Year central committee.

Pope Pius told the churchmen, pilgrims and Romans who jammed the square under a brilliant sky that the dogma had been divinely revealed:

"Right from early times down through the centuries there are found proofs, indications and traces of this common faith of the church."

His papal bull, a Latin document of about 6000 words on 26 sheets of sheepskin parchment, set forth:

"The immaculate mother of God, Mary Ever Virgin, when the course of her life on earth was finished was taken up body and soul into heaven."

A hurricane of shouts and cheers arose as the Pope, seated on a red-damasked throne before the central door of the Basilica, declared:

"This day, long invoked, finally is ours, finally is yours."

He urged that all men, seeking peace, become sons of a single mother, Mary. He described Mary as "a monument to the only

Slug Creases Tunic of Police Pvt. in Gunplay

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

A young rookie policeman was pounding his beat yesterday, when two Puerto Rican Nationalists tried to shoot their way into Blair House and kill President Truman.

He is Pvt. Marion R. Preston, 24, a Navy veteran, assigned to the White House Precinct and a policeman for less than 13 months.

One minute Preston was "just standing" at the corner of 17th st., and Pennsylvania ave. nw. In the next few seconds, he saw three White House policemen felled by bullets, one fatally. He saw one of the Puerto Ricans killed instantly and another seriously wounded.

Preston himself was fired on five times, he said, with one bullet whipping through his tunic.

"I was at 17th and the avenue. That's when it started," he told The Washington Post exclusively.

"First thing I heard was the shooting, maybe 16 or 20 shots, like a machine gun, almost.

"I pulled out my gun and started running over. God knows what had happened, I thought to myself.

"On the way over, I knew I was getting shot at. I felt one bullet

Shots Wake The President

Truman Goes Calmly to Rites For Dill After Killings

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Unruffled by an assassination attempt which got as far as his front steps, President Truman yesterday afternoon went ahead with business as usual.

When the crash of gunfire sounded along Pennsylvania ave. at 2:19 p. m., Mr. Truman was napping in his underwear in a second-floor bedroom at the front of the house. Awakened by the noise, he ran to a window, looked out and saw a man sprawled on the steps.

An unidentified policeman looked up and saw the President peering down. "Get back!" he shouted. "Get back."

Just then Mrs. Truman rushed into the room and somehow got the impression that a Secret Service agent she knew had been wounded. The President calmed her, dressed hurriedly and went downstairs where he met his press secretary, Charles G. Ross, who had rushed over from the White House.

Mrs. Truman's mother, Mrs. David Wallace, was resting in another room in Blair House. Mrs. Wallace is in her 80s and her health has been rather precarious lately.

Ross asked Mr. Truman if he intended keeping his appointment at Arlington and was told, "Why certainly."

"I never saw a calmer man in my life," said Ross.

Echoes of the fusillade on the sidewalk in front of Blair House had hardly died away when the President was on his way to Arlington Cemetery to assist in dedicating a monument to Field Marshal Sir John Dill, British member of the Combined Chiefs of Staff in World War II. Back from Arlington, he kept an appointment with William B. Boyle, Democratic National Chairman.

Boyle said Mr. Truman dismissed the attempt on his life as one of those things a President has to expect.

At Arlington, 45 minutes after the pitched battle under his window, the President listened to eulogies of Sir John Dill and

More Police Added To Blair House Guard

A heavy detail of Metropolitan Police was thrown around Blair House after yesterday's assassination attempt.

Last night, the north side of Pennsylvania ave., between Jackson pl. and 17th st. nw., on which Blair House stands, was roped off.

U. S. Agents Seize Families Of Assassins

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (U.P.)—Federal agents tonight took into custody the families of the two Puerto Rican Nationalists who tried to kill President Truman.

They took Mrs. Oscar Collazo and her 15-year-old daughter, Carmen, to Secret Service headquarters for questioning, and a short time later rushed the wife, aged father-in-law, son and daughter of Grisselio Torresola into three automobiles and sped them away to an undisclosed destination. Five other persons were also taken into custody.

As Mrs. Collazo was being led out by Secret Service men, she turned to her daughter, who hid her face from photographers, and said:

"Don't be ashamed. Let them take your pictures. We are fighting for an ideal."

The Associated Press reported that Mrs. Collazo described her husband as a Puerto Rican revolutionist with a festering desire for the island's independence.

She said she was not sorry he tried to kill President Truman. Mr. Truman could give Puerto Rico its independence, she said, but wouldn't.

"Why should I be sorry," she told newsmen in her neat, three-room Bronx tenement apartment.

Blair House Killings Viewed by Hundreds

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Hundreds of office and store employes, shoppers and pedestrians, cab and streetcar riders—perhaps as many as 2000—witnessed the gunfire battle yesterday between the Puerto Rican assassins and the White House police on Pensylvania ave. in front of Blair House.

Scores found themselves in the line of fire between the blazing pistols of Blair House guards and the attackers.

Two bullets hit shopper-crowded Whelan's drug store, on the southwest corner of 17th st. and Pennsylvania ave., half a block away from the site of the shooting.

One bullet smashed through a plate glass window, a second flew through the open door of Whelan's and landed on the floor, it was reported.

Hayward Simmons, 22, of 600 Columbia rd., a porter at the store, was outside sweeping up when he heard shots. He looked up and "felt a bullet pass by my head" and smashed into the window. A splinter of glass plunged into his arm as Simmons plunged into the store.

Hurried to Safety

Twenty to thirty persons, strolling across the busy 17th and Pennsylvania corner, or waiting on the platform for a streetcar, ran pell-mell for the comparative safety of Whelan's, the Mills Building which houses the drugstore, and other buildings nearby. One woman was seen racing wildly from the east side of 17th st., stumble and fall, get up and keep on running, leaving a black pocketbook and sweater behind her in the middle of the street.

Dozens of employes of the American Automobile Association, located in the Mills Building, had "end zone" seats for the shooting. Several floors of AAA offices face the Blair House at an angle.

Thought It Was Backfiring

Edward Bruder of 727 Tuckerman st. nw., attached to the AAA accounting department on the fourth floor, first thought he heard backfiring of an auto, but after the fourth shot, he looked out the window and saw a policeman running from Blair House into the center of the avenue, whirl, fire away at a civilian crouching under the canopy over the entrance to Blair House.

Charles Kohen, who operates the coin shop at 716 17th st. nw., ran out of his store at the first shot.

"I'm a veteran and I knew that the shooting was just that— and no backfiring," he explained. "I rushed to the corner a few feet away and saw two people go down. So I said to myself: 'What am I doing here anyhow?' I hopped back out of the line of fire."

Opposite Blair House

Ed Bradley, of 5653 19th st., North Arlington, and Archie Davis, of 1705 Pennsylvania ave. nw., were walking along the avenue, heading west, when the shooting broke out just as they were almost across the street from Blair House.

"We ducked behind a tree. We saw three men go down in the firing," said Bradley.

"I saw a policeman run into the middle of Pennsylvania ave.," said Davis, "fall flat on top of the car tracks and begin shooting at a civilian in front of Blair House.

"The civilian was running from the center of the house toward a patrol box at the west corner of the building. As he ran he fired at another White House policeman who came out of an alley at the western side of the Lee House (which adjoined the Blair House on the west).

"As the civilian tried to jump a hedge in front of Blair House, he was caught by slugs and sprawled over the hedge."

Best view of the shooting was directly across the street from the Blair House, from the Pennsylvania, windows of the old State Department Building, which now houses the Bureau of the Budget and the National Security Resources Board.

In the excitement of trying to open a window, Mrs. Katherine Meehan of 2100 Connecticut ave. nw., a secretary for the Budget Bureau director, cut her wrist.

Witnesses on all sides were amazed at the speed with which photographers swarmed over the shooting area. Some poured out of the White House, diagonally across the street, and others were in autos leaving the White House on assignments. Some started shooting pictures, some hopped into nearby shrubbery for safety, some did both.

May E. Hayes, of Arlington, with the Association of American Railroads, was riding in a cab, which stopped for a light at 17th st. and Pennsylvania ave. She heard a shot and thought that it was a backfire.

Miss Hayes and a fellow passenger ducked down in the back of the cab. "The shots seemed to be going off almost next to my ear," she recalls.

Like a Movie 'Take'

Mrs. Lola Lockwood, of Hollywood, Calif., who once worked for a movie studio, was standing alone at the northeast corner of Jackson pl. and Pennsylvania ave. What she saw in front of Blair House across the street, she thought was a movie take.

"I didn't think it was real," the lady from movieland said. "Why I've never in my life before seen anybody shoot at anybody." She couldn't move. Then a man came up and told her: "You'd better get out of here. There may be a stray bullet." She then darted around the corner.

Aid Offer Spurned

Joseph Princiotto, 27, of 2811 Lee blvd., Arlington, was walking near Blair House when he heard the shots.

A graduate student of psysiology at Georgetown University, Princiotto took off his belt to apply a tourniquet to the wounded policeman. However, Secret Service men who rushed to the scene refused to allow him to aid the officer.

Pvt. Donna Jean Cole, 18, Wac driver attached to the Pentagon motor center, was transporting Lieut. Col. Clifford P. Hannum, 904 Potomac ave., Alexandria, to the old State Department Building. She was just turning the corner at 17th into Pennsylvania ave. when they heard the shooting. She said: "When I heard this shooting, I saw a man lying in the street looking wounded and another looking dead. 'Get down!' the colonel yelled at me and I stopped the car, and he pulled me down behind the dashboard. We stayed there a few minutes and then the colonel got out. I was very nervous. I just knew they were trying to assassinate the President, and oh, I was nervous.'

Elderly Lady Snatched From Blair Gunfire

An elderly lady strolling along 17th st. virtually walked into the spray of lead flying down Pennsylvania ave. in yesterday's gun fight in front of Blair House, according to an eyewitness.

Allen Wagner, public relations man for the American Road Builders' Association, told how he and a friend, Arch Carter, were sunning themselves on the low wall around the old State building at 17th and Pennsylvania when the shooting started.

"We were rather casual, I guess, at the sound of the first shot but we moved fast when another followed right away," he said.

"As we ducked behind the large pillar of the old State property at the corner there, an old lady . . . in her 70s, probably . . . strolled north on 17th and started to turn east into Pennsylvania. By then the firing had turned into a pretty steady thing but although the old lady was in a good way to being picked off by some of the slugs, she turned before I could grab her and in a tone which indicated both annoyance and blitheness asked me what on earth was going on.

"I snatched her back of the pillar and told her 'Lady, someone is taking potshots at the President.'"

"Carter and I saw the cop backing into Pennsylvania ave. and shooting toward Blair House and we saw him go down. A moment after he fell, a gray sedan, westbound on Pennsylvania, slammed on its brakes, the driver jumped out and tried to help the cop, but then went along."

Unruffled Miss Truman Presents Maine Concert

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter.

Margaret Truman yesterday proved she was her father's daughter.

Showing no public concern over the attempt of two assassins to murder her father, Miss Truman sang as scheduled in a concert in Portland, Me. Her audience applauded her enthusiastically and the 26-year-old soprano took a curtain call.

Miss Truman received the news of the assassination attempt as she rested before the concert. When she reached the concert stage, she btrayed no signs of nervousness in her opening numbers.

Within 10 minutes after the shooting, police had formed a human chain to push back excited spectators. The entire block in which Blair House was located was soon cleared except for officials and newspapermen.

For nearly two hours after the attempted assassination, no pedestrians or automobiles were permitted to pass in front of the temporary Presidential home. At about 4 p. m., police permitted pedestrian traffic on the south side of the Avenue.

Hundreds of curious bystanders milled around the blocked off area for nearly three hours after the shootings occurred. Police said the pedestrian traffic homebound from work was "unusually heavy." Many took up a stand near the White House gates or sat on the fence there.

President Truman used a rear entrance of Blair House to keep his engagement at Arlington National Cemetery. At 3:25 p. m. the police radio dispatcher told all cars to be "alert along the line." This was the signal that Truman was leaving Arlington Cemetery to return to Blair House.

An elderly woman who asked a policeman what had happened was told "Read about it in the morning papers." Someone in the crowd said, "Aw, that's mean."

The D. C. regional Red Cross blood center said it sent 25 pints of whole blood and 15 of serum albumen to Emergency Hospital to care for the victims.

Sir Oliver S. Franks, British Ambassador to the United States, paid a call on President Truman at about 5:30 p. m. The police cordon was relaxed to permit his car to enter the block.

The attempted assassination was covered by the entire corps of White House correspondents, as well as a goodly sprinkling of other reporters from Washington newspapers. The reporters were so numerous they found they were interviewing themselves in the first few minutes after the shooting.

Thirty minutes after the shooting, Press Secretary Charles Ross and Presidential Aide Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan drove up to Blair House and pressed their way through the crowd of reporters to the door.

A White House aide said Mrs. Truman was "very upset" by the attempted assassination. The President, however, remained calm, it was said.

U. N. Delegates Show Amazement at Attempt

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (AP).—Amazement and incredulity were the first reactions among United Nations delegates at the news that an apparent attempt had been made to assassinate President Truman.

The news was received during the lunch recess of the General Assembly and it spread rapidly through the huge assembly building.

White House Picket Quits After Shooting

By The Associated Press

Mrs. Eola Wright, who has been picketing the White House since September 14, gave up yesterday after the shooting across the street at Blair House.

Mrs. Wright claims her civil rights have been taken from her unfairly, and the placard she carried said she wants them back. She lives in Washington. "I counted eight shots, and then I lost track," she told a reporter. "I decided I'd had enough."

FBI Offers Technical Services in Shooting

By the United Press

The FBI offered its laboratory services to the Secret Service yesterday and awaited developments to determine whether the Blair House shooting might come within its jurisdiction.

If the assassins are suspected of organized or other subversive connections, the FBI could move in.

But the shooting itself is a matter for the Secret Service of the Treasury Department, the Washington Police and the Federal courts.

Morgenstierne Speaks For Diplomatic Corps

To Blair House last night came a steady flow of messages from figures of all ranks and walks of life. Expressing the indignation and solicitude of the diplomatic corps in the Capital was the note from Wilhelm Morgenstierne, ambassador to the United States from Norway and dean of the corps here in point of service.

It said: "On behalf of my colleagues and myself, I want to express to you, Mr. President, our horror and indignation at what happened this afternoon. We feel deeply relieved and gratified that the dastardly attempt on your life was unsuccessful."—signed Wilhelm Morgenstierne, Ambassador from Norway.

Dewey Calls Attempt On Truman 'Outrage'

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey described the shooting at President Truman's Blair House an "outrage."

The Governor, defeated by Mr. Truman in 1948, sent a telegram to the President saying: "Mrs. Dewey joins me in expressing our heartfelt gratification that no harm came to you or your family in the outrage committed at Blair House."

Truman's Hometown Worries About 'Harry'

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Nov. 1 (U.P.).—President Truman's hometown, in the midst of preparations for the Chief Executive's return home to vote, expressed anxiety over the shooting outside Blair House.

The Independence Examiner received numerous telephone calls. Some of the callers asked "If Harry is hurt.." Mr. Truman will arrive in Independence Sunday morning. He will return to Washington shortly after casting his ballot Tuesday morning.

Attlee, St. Laurent Send Messages Here

In Ottawa, Prime Minsiter Louis St. Laurent told President Truman in a telegram that all of his friends in Canada were "vastly relieved" that he was unharmed in the assassination attempt.

In London, the British Press Association said Prime Minister Attlee sent a message to President Truman congratulating him on escaping the attempt on his life.

Police Slay Assassin At Truman's Door

U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence indicated the charge would be "first degree murder in the perpetration of an attempted crime—to assault or injure the President."

The dead Puerto Rican was identified as Griselio Torresola of 1259 Ward dr., also in the Bronx. A bullet pierced his head from ear to ear and he toppled over the hedge onto the tiny lawn in front of the Blair-Lee House, adjoining Blair House on Pennsylvania ave. His age was unknown, but he appeared to be in his thirties.

President Truman's personal physician, Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham, was at Coffelt's bedside when he died at 6:19 p. m. in Emergency Hospital's operating room. Mrs. Coffelt was in an adjoining room.

Leader's Name Signed

Baughman said two handwritten notes, both in Spanish, were found in Torresola's purse. Both bore the names of Pedro Albizu Campos, the Nationalist Party president in Puerto Rico. Baughman said he would make no statement when asked if action would be taken against Albizu. The Nationalists seek independence from the United States for Puerto Rico.

One letter, addressed to "Griselio," said:

"If, for any reason it should be necessary for you to assume leadership of the movement in the United States, you will do so without hesitation of any kind. We are leaving to your high sense of patriotism and sane judgment everything regarding this matter.

"Cordially yours,

"Pedro Albizu Campos."

The other note (both were dated September 21) was a memorandum, Baughman said, also signed by Albizu. It read:

"Gorseline (not otherwise identified) will collect the funds which I considered necessary to take care of the supreme necessities of the cause. He will be responsible directly to the General Treasurer. The delegate will accord you all the necessary cooperation so that your mission may be a triumph."

There was no indication who were the treasurer or delegate referred to.

How It Happened

Here, as Secret Service Chief Baughman reconstructed the story, is how the assassination attempt took place:

At a quarter past two Harry Truman was inside Blair House, his official residence while the White House is being renovated. He had gone there at lunch time to nap and change clothes.

Casual tourists wandered by Blair House, coats in hand in the hot November afternoon. Outside Blair House and adjoining Blair-Lee House four men were stationed. A fifth guard had stopped to talk with one of them.

At the bottom of the Blair House steps, standing by the iron railing to one side, was Pvt. Birdzell. Like the others, he had come to work at 7:30 a. m. and would soon be off—not long after Mr. Truman's departure for Arlington.

About 20 feet to the east, toward Lafayette Park, Pvt. Joseph O. Davidson and Secret Service

Boring Pvt. Davidson

Agent Floyd Boring, were standing by the white east guard box so familiar to passers-by.

Some 30 feet west of the steps, toward 17th street, are the steps down from Blair-Lee House. And another 20 feet west is the west guard box, a duplicate of the east box. Here was stationed Pvt. Coffelt.

Downs is the man who runs the White House grocery truck. When he is not doing that, he helps out at the guard posts. Shortly before the shooting, he had walked up to the west box and stopped to talk with Coffelt.

About 2:15, perhaps a minute or two later, Birdzell was glancing west toward 17th st. He heard something click. He turned to his left and faced Collazo.

Collazo, a rugged man in a blue suit, wearing a hat, aimed a German P-38 Walther automatic at Birdzell and began firing. But he shot low and Birdzell was wounded in a leg.

Birdzell later told his brother-in-law, Clarence J. King of 8214 Queen Annes dr., Silver Spring.

"It was just an act of God the gun didn't go off the first time," meaning the click he heard.

Birdzell, in a split-second decision to draw fire away from Blair House and the President, backed into Pennsylvania ave., firing as he moved. He reached the edge of the car tracks before he crumpled to the ground but not before he fired several more shots while on one knee.

At the moment Collazo first fired, both Davidson and Boring whipped out their guns and fired at him. A bullet from one or the other's gun—it was not clear which last night—ripped Collazo's chest and he slumped to the ground at the edge of the bottom step to Blair House. His head fell on the step, then slid to the sidewalk.

Boring told a reporter:

"He started shooting at Birdzell and we let him have it."

Collazo's gun fell to the ground by the fence toward Blair-Lee House, an empty clip at its side. His shirt soon was a mass of blood, some of it seeping to the sidewalk.

Apparently at the instant Collazo began shooting at Birdzell, Torresola took on both Coffelt and Downs, 50 feet to the west. Sometime during the wild shooting a streetcar pulled to a halt in front of Blair House but no one in it was hit.

Collazo said not a word to Birdzell before he fired, the injured policeman told the Secret Service. No one knew last night whether Torresola had spoken a word before he, too, began firing with a German Lugar.

In an instant Coffelt was shot in the stomach and chest. He slumped, face down, into the west police box. The would-be assassin fell dead over the Blair-Lee House hedge.

Downs, slugs in his stomach, chest and head, ran a dozen feet into a basement entrance to Blair-Lee House and collapsed in a ground floor kitchen.

Thousands Fill Street

Someone turned in a police alarm at 2:19 and seconds later police cars were converging on Blair House from all directions, sirens screaming. Passerbys sensed it was more than an ordinary police call and thousands soon filled the street and jammed the sidewalk. Reporters rushed up from all directions, some of them from the White House press room across the street.

For half an hour all was confusion. Ambulances arrived and carried off the injured men and dozens more White House police and Secret Service agents ran to the President's residence. The Indian summer calm was gone for the day.

A Washington policeman, Pvt. Marion Preston, walking his beat, rushed up from 17th and Pennsylvania. Somebody's bullet nicked the left side of his coat but did not hit his body.

Half a dozen slugs struck Blair House, two smashing panes in a ground floor housekeeping room and piercing window shades. No one was hurt. Another cracked a door jamb behind the east police box while still others nicked the yellow-white paint of the building itself. None went above the ground floor level. The President's living room quarters are one flight up, his bedroom two flights up.

Last night Secret Service agents and police toted up all the shooting and gave out this score card:

Shots by Collazo—9; by Torresola—6: total—15.

Shots by Birdzell—5; by Davidson—5; by Coffelt—1; by Boring—3; by Downs—0: total—14. A fifteenth shot was fired by Vincent Moroz, a Secret Service agent, who arrived while the shooting was going on, Baughman said.

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, who controls the Secret Service, issued a statement praising both his own agents and the White House police. He said in part:

"It was a tragic affair but it proved the effectiveness of the security measures of the Secret Service and demonstrated the bravery of the officers and special agents who are prepared to sacrifice their lives to protect the person of the President. I am extremely proud of these members of the Secret Service . . . and especially of the courage which they displayed today in preventing what could have been a national tragedy."

White House Police Inspector Hobart Francis declared the dead policeman and his two wounded companions were "three of the best men in an exceptionally good force."

Francis called Coffelt a "very efficient officer" and pointed out he was a World War II veteran. All three were sharpshooters and Downs had additionally qualified as an expert marksman.

Baughman praised the White House guards.

"It is very unfortunate that we have radicals in this country who would do a thing like this. But we are fortunate to have men who will lay down their lives to protect the President."

The renovation of the White House has made the job of protecting the President additionally difficult because of the exposed front of Blair House on busy Pennsylvania ave.

Whether the two gunmen could have shot the President had they arrived a few minutes later when he was leaving the building is something that doubtless will be debated for years. When the President walks down the steps additional guards are with him, coming from their posts inside the building. But he is exposed to public view—and possible aim by assassins.

On arrival in Washington Tuesday Collazo and Torresola checked in at the Harris Hotel, 17 Massachusetts ave. nw., at 10:30 p. m. that night. Hotel officials said they "acted perfectly naturally."

One clerk, who wouldn't give reporters his name, said:

"Each one carried a simple suitcase. They were definitely foreign but nothing else distinguished them. They acted like their were separate but apparently they were together. Each asked for a separate room."

Minutes after the identity of the men was established, Secret Service agents and police were at the hotel. What they found, if anything, was not revealed.

Party Leader's Aide Sister of Torresola

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Griselio Torresola may have sought personal revenge for injuries suffered by his sister and brother here during this week's revolt, it was learned tonight.

Police identified Torresola as a brother of Doris Torresola, personal secretary to National Party Leader Pedro Albizu Campos. She was wounded three times during the Nationalist Party rebellion here on Monday and Tuesday. She is in the hospital here.

Torresola's brother, Elio, was arrested yesterday when the National Guard blasted the Nationalists out of the stronghold of Jayuya, police said.

Collazo Behind Bars in Special "Safety Room"

By the United Press

Oscar Collazo, one of the men who tried to shoot President Truman, rested last night on a cot in a special "safety room" at Emergency Hospital.

Hospital authorities refused to reveal the location of the room on orders from the Secret Service.

Hospital Administrator James Capossela said the safety room is specially designed for patients under guard.

There are iron bars at the window, he said.

Inside the room are two guards. Outside are two more. Two are members of the Metropolitan Police force. The others are Secret Service men.

Errol Flynn Faces Monaco Rape Charge

MONACO, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—A Civil Court judge said today that Film Actor Errol Flynn was served a summons on his wedding day last week charging him with raping a 16-year-old French girl aboard his yacht Zaca.

The summons was issued on the basis of a complaint filed by the father of the girl, Danielle Darvin. Flynn was accused of raping her in August, 1949, after spotting her swimming off Monaco. She was 15 at the time.

then rose to speak quietly and calmly of his hopes for peace. He then shook hands with Lady Dill, Defense Secretary Marshall, Sir John's close friend, and Anthony Eden representing the British government at the ceremonies.

At the White House, Boyle said he found Mr. Truman "not upset at all" except about the three White House policemen who were shot down by the assassins. Boyle said the President "knew all about the confession in which one of the men said he and his companion had come here from New York for the express purpose of shooting the Chief Executive.

The Secret Service, charged with the President's safety, by no means shared his fatalistic acceptance of risk, the same fatalism which has led him to say of his frequent airplane trips: "If I'm going to get it, it makes no difference whether I'm in an airplane or an oxcart."

Additional precautions to guard the President were taken immediately, although U. E. Baughman, Secret Service chief, would not detail what they were. At Arlington Secret Service agents swarmed all over the place and were obviously watchful beyond their customary routine.

Asked if the Secret Service would institute new over-all security regulations, Baughman said: "It appears we'll have to." Again he would not go into details.

Baughman said the Secret Service was "familiar with the group" to which the two assassins belonged—the Puerto Rican Nationalist Party—but denied having had any "specific warning" of an assassination plot.

Attempt on Life of President Truman Recalls Worry Over Safety on Puerto Rican Trip

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

The vain attempt by two Puerto Ricans to kill President Truman recalls that there was considerable worry about his safety when he visited Puerto Rico in the winter of 1948.

This was so, despite the fact that Mr. Truman, shortly after he landed on the "Gibraltar of the Caribbean," said in a speech that the people of Puerto Rico ought to have the right to determine for themselves whether they wanted to be independent of the United States.

Reporters who made the Caribbean trip with President Truman heard, after their arival in San Juan on February 21, 1948, that advocates of independence planned to "picket" the Chief Executive.

Mr. Truman himself remarked a day or so later, in the Virgin Islands, that he had heard that he would "not be received cordially."

Actually, the President was well received in Puerto Rico. All kinds of ominous reports were flying around, however, and the Secret Service operatives and the island police obviously were under a strain.

Those of us who were along never did find out what happened to the independents' advocates who intended to picket the President in the one-time Spanish colony. It may have been that Mr. Truman's route was so arranged as to bypass them. We later heard that a "Communist demonstration" took place somewhere, but we did not see it.

The Chief Executive, who always seems to make a hit when he leaves the mainland, did several things that endeared him to the Puerto Ricans. In the 400-year-old Fortaleza, home of the governor, he sat down and played Franz Lehar's "Merry Widow Waltz."

In the garden, a little later, he recalled his visits to Mexico City, Ottawa and Rio, but told us that "Nowhere have I received a more cordial welcome than in Puerto Rico."

After he landed in San Juan, following a flight from Key West, Fla., in the old "Sacred Cow," Mr. Truman walked the length of a long line of men, women and children, chatting and smiling.

Once he stopped so that a youngster could take his picture.

Mr. Truman, like most Presidents, had a hard time becoming accustomed to the ever-present

"Inside Man" Waited With Machine Gun

Even if Oscar Collazo and Griselio Torresola had slain the outside guards in their battle at Blair House yesterday, it is doubtful either could have reached the President.

What they didn't know in their strategic plot was that a Secret Service agent just inside the door was unlimbering a submachine gun which would have mowed them down.

Secret Service men when he first moved into the White House in 1945. Gradually, however, he made the adjustment and ultimately became very fond of men like James Rowley, chief of the Secret Service detail, and Henry Nicholson, the Secret Service man who is usually at his side when he moves about.

At one point, early in his Administration, Mr. Truman suggested that his White House limousine be stopped for red traffic lights. The Secret Service men dissuaded him, pointing out that to stop would make him a stationary target.

In one thing, however, Mr. Truman has had his way. He insists that his car be slowed down whenever there are children lined up along the way to see him. He likes to smile at them and wave to them.

Familiar with Operations

After more than five years in the White House, Mr. Truman knows a lot about the operations of the Secret Service. He appreciates that the crack organization is required by law to protect the President and members of his family—that is, the First Lady and Margaret Truman as well as himself.

He is familiar with the elaborate precautions they take for his security; how chefs, waiters, and even entertainers are checked on when he goes out to dine; how a hundred or more Washington policemen are detailed to reinforce the SS when he goes, say, to the Statler or the Mayflower; how they check up on worshipers when he goes to church, and how, even, they guard him when he takes a swim in the White House pool.

The Secret Service was made responsible for the President's safety by an act of Congress after the assassination of President McKinley.

Only a Few at First

In the early days—the administrations of Presidents Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft — there were only a few Washington uniformed policemen stationed at the White House. They were sent over by the Third Precinct Station. Later on, the White House got its own uniformed detail, and it was members of this detail that shot down the two assassins yesterday.

Once Mr. Truman moved into the White House the protection job became much more difficult than it had been in the previous 12 years.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, as the result of paralysis, stayed pretty close to the White House.

Mr. Truman, a vigorous 66, not only moves around a lot, but insists on roaming the streets of Washington on his early morning walks.

This has been the subject of debate on Capitol Hill.

About three years ago, when the Eightieth Congress was preparing to cut the appropriation of the Secret Service for economy reasons, the then Representative Everett Dirksen (R., Ill.) sought to justifiy a cut that would result in the firing of 60 Secret Service agents.

Dirksen, who is now running for the Senate against Senator Scott Lucas, Democratic floor leader, challenged a statement by James T. Maloney, then chief of the Secret Service, that his outfit was required to give the Chief Executive extraordinary protection during a "turbulent" period.

"I am wondering," said Representative Dirksen, "why it takes so much more money to guard President Truman than it took to guard President Roosevelt and some of the other Presidents at a time when there is a good deal of serenity. Are they not making a fetish of the security business? Great God, this war is over, and it has been over for 18 months."

Dirksen, talking at a meeting of the House Appropriations Committee, said that he recently had conferred with President Truman.

He continued: "At 6 o'clock in the morning, he gets up and wanders alone in Washington. And comes walking along the Archives building alone, and is not under surveillance."

Maloney smiled.

"Yes, he was under very close surveillance—more than you probably realize," Maloney said.

Maloney didn't go into details.

It is pretty well known, however, that at least seven Secret Service men are along when Mr. Truman goes for a walk. Besides those who walk beside him there are agents ahead and behind, across the street, and in an automobile not far away.

President Truman walked from the White House to Blair House, his temporary abode across the street, when he went to luncheon or finished the day's work. The crowds became so great, however, that the Secret Service advised him to ride, despite the stone's-throw distance.

He agreed to do so. Had he balked, yesterday's melodrama may not have had such a fortunate outcome.

High Tribute Rendered Dill At Arlington

A bronze equestrian statue to Field Marshal Sir John Dill, who died on duty here during World War II, was unveiled at Arlington Cemetery yesterday in the presence of President Truman and other notables.

British representative on the Combined (British - American) Chiefs of Staff, Sir John died November 4, 1944. He was buried at Arlington, where he wished to rest among the dead of America's wars. Congress adopted a special resolution granting his wish.

In a brief address, President Truman recalled the "real devotion to him and a complete trust in him" he inspired among his American associates in the war years. And that, he said, "is the greatest thing that can come to any man, when he is completely trusted by his associates."

"It is important to the peace of the world," the President said, "that peoples understand each other, and have full faith in each other's sincerity.

"That is all we ask. That is all we want. We have no ambitions, only world peace."

He recalled the close Anglo-American relationship which Sir John Dill epitomized and said "maintenance of a perfect understanding between the people of Great Britain and the United States is . . . of the greatest importance to the peace of the world." He added:

"Now, if we can just win the peace in the same manner that we won the war, we can look forward to generations of happiness on earth."

Defense Secretary George C. Marshall, who as United States Chief of Staff, was very close to the British field marshal, credited his friend with an influence that "was greater than that of probably any other individual in welding together the military forces" of Great Britain and the United States. That "complete accord," he said, "more than any other factor gave us the victory in Europe."

The friendship between Marshall and Dill was one of the few intimacies the American military leader permitted himself. It was well known in Washington at the time that a close and cordial relationship existed between Marshall and the tall, thin Englishman. The cordiality of this relationship was believed to have gone far toward assuring the harmony which existed almost everywhere in the field between British and Americans.

This association was alluded to also by British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks, who said yesterday:

"The rider on his horse has a message for today and for the future. He reminds us all that in the future as in the past the close association of the United States and Britain, of the English-speaking peoples of the world and their friends, is the one sure defense of freedom.

"Today we have friends, nations of dierent culture and dirnt languag, but one with us in their belief in the dignity of man and the preservation of their liberty."

The statue, over Sir John Dill's grave at Roosevelt and Grant avenues in the cemetery, represents him in uniform astride a charger, his marshal's baton, held in his right hand and resting on his right thigh. He is gazing stteadfastly out across the acres of crosses which crown the hills of Arlington.

The statue was the work of Herbert Hazeltine and is mounted on a pedestal of Dakota marble designed by Lawrence Grant White and W. Welles Bosworth. Among all the memorials in Arlington Cemetery, it is one of only two representing soldiers mounted.

The other is of Phil Kearney, Indian fighter and Civil War general, who was killed not far from here at Chantilly, Va.

Pvt. Birdzell's Condition Fair At Emergency

Pvt. Donald T. Birdzell, who exchanged shots with one of the assassins at Blair House yesterday, is a former Metropolitan policeman and a World War II veteran.

He is in fair condition at Emergency Hospital, with bullet wounds in each leg and is expected to recover.

His combined service on the White House and local police forces totals about 17 years, relatives said yesterday. He left the Metropolitan force in January, 1940. He had a long tour of duty as an MP in the Pacific during the last war.

Pvt. Birdzell, 43, and his wife, Helen, have lived at 4937 New Hampshire ave. nw., the past 14 years. Mrs. Birdzell, the former Helen Murphy, was born here. He is a native of Toledo, Ill., where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Birdzell and two sisters now live. A brother, Roy jr., is a chief petty officer in the Navy, stationed at Norfolk, Va. Another brother, Ivan, was killed in 1944 while serving in the European theater as a glider pilot.

Mrs. Birdzell, A Veterans Administration clerk, was at work yesterday when a sister telephoned that her husband had been injured. The Birdzells have no children.

$700 Asked for Short Cut

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 1 (U.P.)—Mrs. Clyde Berry, 20, asked $700 damages today in a suit charging that a department store beautician cut 16 inches of hair from her 18-inch-long tresses, thereby causing her "pain and disgrace."

Three Slugs Felled Guard Joseph Downs

At least three bullets punctured the body of Pvt. Joseph H. Downs, 44, a White House guard in plain clothes who was standing at the west gate of Blair House during the attempted assassination of the President.

Private Downs, a veteran of 11 years' service with the White House police, was wounded in head, chest and abdomen. He is in critical condition in Emergency Hospital.

A native of Cincinnati, Ohio, he lives at 10620 S. Dunmoor dr., Woodmoor, Silver Spring.

Private Downs is the husband of Mrs. Mary Downs, and the father of four boys, Joseph, jr., 20, James, 18, William, who will become 16 today, and John, 6.

The wounded officer served in the Marine Corps before joining the Metropolitan Police on September 6, 1930. He served in the Traffic Division until October 31, 1939, when he transferred to the White House Police.

White House Policeman Coffelt Dies

Pvt. Leslie Coffelt, who died last night as a result of wounds he received while protecting President Truman from two assassins, was a "splendid duty man" and a crack shot," according to fellow officers.

Coffelt, who lived at 1915 N. Wayne st., Arlington, Va., had been assigned to duty at Blair House since the President and his family moved there. He had been with the White House force since 1940.

Private Coffelt's brother, Harry Coffelt of 3426 N. 12th rd., Arlington, gave a reporter this background:

One of a family of five children, the White House policeman was born in Strasburg, Va., and educated in public schools there.

He moved to Washington about 12 years ago and worked as a hotel engineer before joining the White House force. According to his brother, Private Coffelt served in the Army from 1943 to 1944 but did not go overseas.

He was an Espiscopalian and an active Mason. His wife, Mrs. Cressie Coffelt, is employed at The Hecht Co. department store in Washington. His stepdaughter, Cora Jane Wilson, lives at the N. Wayne st. address.

Private Coffelt has two other brothers, Norman Coffelt of Glen Burnie, Md., and Hollis Coffelt of Middletown, Va., and a sister, Mrs. Ernest Good of Strasburg, Va. His mother, Mrs. Effie Coffelt, also lives in Strasburg.

Death of Seaman Ruled Accidental

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 1 (AP).—A naval board of inquiry today ruled as accidental the death of Seaman Herbert L. Fulton, found floating in the Severn River near the Naval Academy October 20.

The 29-year-old seaman had been missing from the station ship Reina Mercedes since October 14.

Blair House Gunplay Jolts FBI Girl on Way to Work

By Charles E. Reiche
Post Reporter

"It was a jolting way to start the day."

That's how Miss Madeline Evanek, FBI clerk, described the barrage of gunfire on Pennsylvania ave. in front of Blair House at 2:20 p. m. yesterday.

Miss Evanek was standing on the Capital Transit streetcar loading platform immediately west of 17th st. at the intersection of Pennsylvania about 200 feet from the President's residence when the gunplay began.

"There were about 10 of us waiting for a downtown car when the firing started," she said, "and I was on my way to work." She explained that she worked a late shift at her office.

"I looked over toward Blair House and saw a man in a gray pin-stripe suit backing toward 17th st. in a crouched position. At the same time a police officer backed out into the avenue from in front of Blair House and as he moved he kept firing in the general direction of the house."

Miss Evanek said that she and the others on the platform dashed for the safety of doorways on the south side of Pennsylvania ave.

"As I reached the sidewalk," she continued, "I saw that the policeman had been shot, for he staggered to his knees. He put out one hand on the road, though, and shot again toward the booth between Blair House and the Court of Claims building, but collapsed on the car tracks.

"I noticed then that there was a man in plain clothes in the doorway of the Court of Claims who was standing there with a gun in his hand.

"At about this time people began rushing toward Blair House from all directions and I was pushed along with them. As I got in front of the old State Department building directly opposite the President's house, four or five policemen rushed out to help the officer on the tracks.

"The first thing I noticed when I got there in front of the old State building was a man in plain clothes sprawled near the bottom of the front steps to Blair House, under the canopy leading to the walk.

"The police covered the fallen officer with a blanket and put a cap under his head. And several of them started to shove back the crowd of 400 or 500 that had built up and was starting to fill the avenue."

"Then," she went on, "as the mob kept piling up I noticed that the policemen were paying all their attention to the man on the tracks and to another man behind a hedge in front of the house between Blair House and the Court of Claims. They didn't go near the man on the steps so I figured he was the aggressor.

"About that time ambulances arrived and I saw the two policemen placed in them and taken away and finally they picked up the man off the steps and put him in one and went off.

MADELINE EVANEK
. . . witnessed gun battle

"Police cars had arrived, of course, by then and the mob was all herded out of the block so I started on my way downtown and to work."

Petite, brunette and sharp, Miss Evanek said she had come to Washington 7½ years ago and has been working for the Government for some time. She is a native of Huey, Pa., and lives at 1501 27th st. se.

3 U. S. Presidents Assassins' Victims

Three United States Presidents have been killed by assassins' bullets but thousands of threats have been made against the lives of the country's 33 Chief Executives.

Fatal assaults were made on Presidents Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley.

A bullet meant for Franklin D. Roosevelt at Miami's Bayfront Park on February 15, 1933, narrowly missed the then President-elect and fatally wounded Anton J. Cermak, mayor of Chicago, who was accompanying Roosevelt on a visit to Florida.

That was the last attempt to kill a President before yesterday.

Guiseppi Zangara, 33, an Italian, missed Roosevelt because a woman spectator hit his arm as he aimed. Zangara, before his electrocution in March, 1933, said he was against "all capitalists."

Roosevelt I Hit

The attempt on Roosevelt's life was the first on a man of presidential rank since 1912 when Theodore Roosevelt was wounded at a Milwaukee campaign rally by an insane man, John Shrenk, who fired a shot that hit the Progressive Party candidate in the left side. He was not seriously wounded.

William McKinley was shot on September 6, 1901, at the Pan-American exposition in Buffalo, N. Y. As he extended his hand to Leon Czolgosz, an anarchist, the latter fired twice. McKinley died eight days later. The demented killer was executed.

Washington has been the scene of only one on-the-spot assassination—Abraham Lincoln's on April 14, 1864, at Ford's Theater on what is now 10th st., seven blocks from Blair House. His killer, actor John Wilkes Booth, was tracked down by soldiers and shot.

Garfield Shot Here

James Abram Garfield was the victim of an unbalanced office-seeker, three months after he assumed the presidency. Charles J. Guiteau shot him as the President entered the old B.&O. railway station here July 2, 1881. Garfield died September 9, two months later. Guiteau was hanged.

Thousands of threats and plots against presidents have been uncovered by Secret Service agents. Last year alone, 1925 were reported. Most involve mentally ill persons, the agents said.

French Set Pressure For Own Army Plan

PARIS, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—The French government, taking advantage of the deadlocked Washington defense talks, stepped up pressure on other western European nations tonight to accept France's unified European army plan.

Officials and most sections of the French press made it clear that the French are far from disappointed at the Washington decision to refer the deadlocked German rearmament issue to political and military committees for study.

They feel that the danger of the United States and other North Atlantic Pact nations riding roughshod over France objections to immediate rearmament of Germany has been deferred.

Waiter Fashions Noose of Tie and Slashes Wrists

Alfred Riess, 65, a waiter at the Willard Hotel, was found hanging about 11:30 a. m. yesterday in his room at the Keystone Hotel, 714 17th st. nw. A maid discovered the body.

Police said Riess had fastened a necktie to a bed post and fashioned a noose of the tie. He had also slashed his wrists with a razor blade, detectives said.

A note in the room said: "Sorry for what I did. There is no other way out. God bless you."

Police were investigating to determine the cause of Riess' remorse. Coroner A. Magrudr MacDonald withheld a certificate pending investigation.

hit my tunic, but I didn't know whether I had been hit.

There was much confusion in those few seconds, everybody shooting at everybody else, I decided I better stop and look the situation over. I couldn't see the President, but the guns were still going.

"A policeman was shooting from the middle of Pennsylvania ave. One of the civilians was shooting from behind the hedge, near the Lafayette Park side of Blair House. Another civilian was running into the Court of Claims building, next door to Blair House. He looked kind of suspicious to me, but I figured he might have been just an innocent bystander.

"Anyway I didn't fire at him. I didn't fire a shot all day."

"The policeman that was firing from the middle of the avenue, I saw him go down, still firing.

"By the tmie I got in front of Blair House, the shooting was over. Everyone was lying there. I saw what had happened and turned in the box and called the ambulance.

"I saw three people in civilian clothes that looked as if they were involved. They shot two of them and the third one was this guy that ran into the Court of Claims. I didn't shoot him because at that time I didn't know who ought to be hit."

At his home, 708 N. Jackson st., Arlington, Va., last night, Preston was deeply disturbed abo t first newspaper reports of the shooting which identified him as one of the assailants.

Preston said he had been assigned to that beat "on and off" during his service on the force. He said he went on duty at 8 a. m. yesterday.

Nothing unusual happened on the beat, he said, until the shooting.

40 Divisions for Europe by 1953

stated, there would be "no way to prevent clandestine links" between them which would eventually result in a German army.

If the Western German government at Bonn is allowed to set up a ministry of defense, Moch added, this would become an undercover German GHQ.

Acheson declared that everyone agrees that there should be no German national army, no German general staff and no German war industry. Such is not in dispute, he stated.

The American secretary did not mention the Pentagon insistence on contribution of national forces by divisions rather than in small units.

Military Chiefs Agreed

But the military chiefs of all the 12 NATO powers—including France—are understood to have agreed earlier that attempting to form effective military forces by mixing regiments, battalions or companies of different nationalities within the basic army unit—the division—is militarily unsound and could not produce a fighting army as things are at present

Moch, however, insisted last night at a press conference at the French Chancery that language and other difficulties have been solved in other international armies. He mentioned Korea. But the Frenchman did not elaborate on where the situation has been found practicable or spell out how the Korean situation parallels what is planned in Europe

He also declared that some American and British generals have said that inclusion of complete German divisions are necessary to the over-all western European plan.

Moch said that under the program agreed to by the Defense Ministers this week for the contributions of forces by the member nations, France would put up from one-fourth to one-third of the tactical aviation and half of the land forces.

He outlined French army contribution as follows:

Ten divisions next year—five at war footing and five to be ready within three days. This contrasts with five French divisions now—three in Germany at 70 percent of war strength and two in France even less complete, he said.

Fifteen divisions by 1952—half at war strength and half ready within three days.

Twenty by 1953—divided the same way as to readiness.

After 1953, organization of additional French divisions in reserve, to be ready to fight in 30 to 90 days. These divisions—about 23,000-man strength—are exclusive of the seven divisions fighting in Indo-China, he said.

Moch declared that France would match one division for every division put up by the other NATO powers for the defense of western Europe. That calls for national divisions under the original plan, not the mixed divisions France wants, he indicated.

The Frenchman contended that there need be no delay in the rearmament of Europe if the French program is accepted. As soon as the Schuman Plan for organization of western Europe's iron and coal industries on a supra-national basis is signed and a west Europe defense minister is named, establishment of international divisions can commence, he declared.

Moch said the conversion of national divisions into international ones could build a western European mixed arm of 100,000 the first year.

German soldiers should be integrated in battalion units of about one thousand men, he stated.

Moch denied France was being "obstructionist" or thinking only of protecting its own borders and stressed that the Pleven Plan for arming Germany was only part of the whole picture of unifying Western Europe along with the Schuman Plan for economic unity.

He was high in his praise of Secretary of State George Marshall for his "understanding" of the French position and "fairness" as presiding officer of the recently adjourned conference.

At his press conference earlier in the day, Acheson had no word of reproach for the French who stood out alone against the American plan for setting up a unified Western European armed force. On this point, Moch declared last night several of the other European members were coming around to his plan.

Acheson evaded repeated efforts by reporters to get him to say whether the United States would refuse to send additional troops to Europe as a result of the French stand.

There is no disposition on anyone's part to hold up anything, he said; our whole effort is to go ahead, and there is no question of anyone holding, blocking or fighting on the German issue.

It is very important to get the new French divisions set up, the Secretary went on, and the United States is helping the French to do it. He added that the United States is most sympathetic and wholly enthusiastic about the Schuman plan for the pooling of French, German and other European coal and steel industries.

Acheson argued that extraordinary progress had been made since early September, when the United States first agreed to put new troops in Europe into a combined army. This new concept of a unified force was a great step forward, he said. The job of the North Atlantic Treaty organization is to decide on the type and form of German participation, he said, and then to take the question up with the Germans themselves.

He then tried to sum up the accomplishments of the defense ministers in their recent meeting. He said they had done an important job in deciding what each country would contribute to the combined force.

There is a large area of agreement, but still a large area of Germany can make its most useful contribution, the Secretary said cheerfully.

He said the military committee and the Council of Deputies probably would hold their joint meetings in London, and without long delay. Other sources indicated the next Defense Ministers meeting may be held in London about December 1.

Acheson to Ask Aid for Tito

estimated by Marshal Tito's government to amount to 105 million dollars.

Acheson said that consultations on the relief program had started with congressional leaders, including Republicans. Although he did not name them, it could be assumed that they were members of the Senate and House Foreign Policy Committees, which would have to authorize the new aid.

The Secretary told his press conference that the need of hurrying help to Yugoslavia will be an important factor in President Truman's decision on when to summon the lame-duck Congress into special session. The date announced so far is November 27, but there have been reports that the President has been considering November 15 instead.

Administration officials, it was learned yesterday, have already made arrangements for about 25 million dollars of the stop-gap program. It consists of these components:

1. The Economic Cooperation Administration will attempt to supply the 200,000 metric tons of wheat needed in the program. It will call on Italy to ship to Yugoslavia 175,000 tons of flour it has available. ECA will replace it at a later date with shipments of unmilled wheat to Italy. The cost will be $12,500,000.

2. The Export-Import Bank, which has already made 2 million dollars available to Yugoslavia out of a 15-million-dollar loan, will now release the rest. Four millions will go for items not in Agriculture Department surplus stocks—lard, sugar and some coarse grains. Another 4 millions will go for freight, and five millions for transportation equipment to carry the supplies from Yugoslavian ports to the starving hinterland.

"We are both members of the Nationalist Party."

The Nationalists were involved in a two-day Puerto Rican revolt that officially was pronounced quelled today. It cost 30 lives.

The Nationalists demand complete independence for Puerto Rico from the United States.

Mrs. Collazzo, a stout, 42-year-old woman, described her husband as "a smart man," a church-going metal polisher, who came here from Puerto Rico 25 years ago. He earned up to $71 a week, she said.

He dressed in his best clothes yesterday, Mrs. Collazzo said, and told her he was going back to Puerto Rico because "we must be free—we can no longer be slaves of the United States."

She said she and her husband voted for Roosevelt and Truman but that they blamed Truman mainly for their nation's plight.

Mrs. Collazzo expressed strong admiration for Puerto Rican Nationalist Party President Albizu Campos. Neighbors said he lived in the same, old-fashioned Bronx tenement as the Collazzos until he returned to Puerto Rico about five years ago.

The neighbors described Collazzo as a "quiet, meek man."

Mrs. Collazzo said her husband never was a Communist.

"He was only a member of the Nationalist Party," she told newsmen who jammed her small apartment.

"We voted for Roosevelt and Truman because they promised us independence," she went on, "and we did not get it. Roosevelt is dead so we can't blame him."

She said the Blair House shooting did not surprise her.

"I'm not surprised at anything these days—with revolution going on in Puerto Rico.

"For every 1 million dollars Truman gave us, he took back 2 million dollars."

The Nationalist Party is on the attorney general's list of subversive organibations which "seek to alter the form of government of the United States by unconstitutional means."

Newsmen asked the woman if she was sorry to hear of an attempt on Mr. Truman's life she replied:

"No, they don't feel sorry when an attempt is made to kill President Campos."

Then she was asked if she thought her husband was right in trying to kill the President of the United States.

"I don't say Oscar did right," Mrs. Collazzo began. Then she hesitated a moment. Her voice dropped and, without finishing the sentence, she added:

"But according to him—."

Tension Eased

Puerto Rican Rebels Face Rounding Up

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Nov. 1 (AP).—Government troops hunted down the remnants of a band of anti-United States revolutionists today. While there was some shooting, Puerto Rico had a day of comparative calm following the two-day Nationalist revolt.

Governor Luis Munoz Marin said the island territory still is tense and national guardsmen will continue to patrol troubled areas as long as it is necessary.

Police and guardsmen still maintained a cordon around the San Juan home of Pedro Albizu Campo, the 63-year-old Nationalist leader. But no warrant has been issued for his arrest.

A total of 118 Nationalist members have been rounded up by police. At least six of them are charged with murder. Thirty persons were killed in the outbreak, including 10 police, one guardsman, 15 Nationalists and four civilians.

Munoz Marin said there was no proof that Communists took a direct part in the uprising, but they helped to stir trouble. Earlier he had termed the abortive revolt a "conspiracy against democracy, helped by the Communists."

(In Moscow, the Communist newspaper Pravda said the rebellion was caused by the sending of Puerto Rican youths to fight in Korea and the forcing on the island of a new constitution by the United States. It declared the protest movement leading to the revolt "against American authority" was headed by the Nationalist Party, the Communist Party and the General Union of Workers.)

Munoz Marin declared the uprising had brought Puerto Rico's major parties closer together. He predicted that 95 percent of the voters would approve the new constitution in a plebiscite to be held June 4, 1951.

The revolt was engineered by a group of Nationalists said to number anywhere from 400 to 1500. Where they got their arms was somewhat of a mystery. Many German-manufactured rifles seized by police from the Nationalists were believed to be war souvenirs.

Blair House Attack Similar to One in San Juan

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The attack on Blair House yesterday while President Truman was inside taking a nap followed a pattern that has marked recent outrages committed by the handful of Puerto Ricans that makes up the so-called Nationalist movement.

Only last Monday—two days before the attack here—an almost identical assault was made upon the Governor's House in San Juan, Puerto Rico, while Gov. Munoz Marin, chief executive of the island, was inside resting.

Dispatches from Puerto Rico last night reported that yesterday's outrage at Blair House was followed immediately by action there to wipe out the small number of Nationalists who have apparently decided upon terroristic methods to gain attention.

Governor Marin's government announced that Nationalist Party members will be hunted down and exterminated. A call has gone out to get the Nationalist leader Pedro Albizu Campos dead or alive.

In the attack at San Juan just before noon Monday, five men approached the main gate of the governor's palace by automobile. At the gate a man jumped out with a sub-machinegun and started blasting at the two policemen who are always on guard at either side of the entrance. The fire, as at Blair House, was directed at the police, not, apparently, at the house or anyone in it. One policeman was wounded, and died later.

As at Blair House, other policemen and plainclothesmen joined in the melee. In less than 10 minutes, four of the five assailants were dead and one was wounded.

The similarity between the two assaults was so distinct that even before the chief actors in yesterday's sensation in Pennsylvania avenue were identified, Russell Derrickson of the Carribbean Division of the Office of Territories at the Interior Department, suggested Puerto Ricans might be involved.

Also involved in the confusion surrounding the relationship of recent incidents in Puerto Rico and the gun battle in Washington was an explosion in the New York office of the Puerto Rican government labor office yesterday.

Late in the morning 50 persons fled screaming from the office when an unidentified man hurled two flaming gasoline-filled bottles into the room. The home-made bombs failed to explode. No one was injured.

Administration Officer Wenceslao Sotomayor, in charge of the office which finds jobs for migrant Puerto Rican laborers, said, "I wouldn't say yes and I wouldn't say no" when asked if he thought the incident stemmed from the Puerto Rico revolt.

Albizu, head of the Nationalist Party that has been the source of the recent trouble, was released from the Federal Prison at Atlanta, Ga., only a short time ago, Derrickson said. He had served a five-year sentence for an earlier series of outbreaks against the Government. Since his release, and within less than a week, revolts inspired by Albizu have spread to a dozen Puerto Rican towns and villages and have resulted in more than 35 deaths. The pattern in all the towns is the same. A carload of terrorists drives into the village, opens fire on police or national guardsmen, and then attempts a getaway. Sometimes they stop to set fires, bomb police stations or commit similar acts of violence. But always, as at Blair House, their attacks are first directed at the police.

Albizu, according to Derrickson, has kept his party from taking part in Puerto Rican elections since 1932, when he got only 9000 votes out of 460,000 cast. At that time he declared Puerto Rico a republic and himself the president. He has refused to permit his followers to vote in local elections, because, he said, to do so would be to recognize the sovereignty of the "United States invaders."

All told, officials here believe, the Nationalists number about 400—not more than 500—in a population of two and a half million. Included in their ranks probably are some of Puerto Rico's small group of Communists. The FBI has maintained an office in Puerto Rico for several years and is believed to have an almost complete file of Communists, although yesterday's affair indicates to Interior officials that the FBI information about the Nationalists is lacking.

32 States to Elect Governors on Nov. 7

By D. Harold Oliver
Associated Press Reporter

The political fortunes of many a nationally known figure will be at stake November 7 when 32 States elect Governors.

For some governorship candidates, the result will decide whether or not they are considered for presidential or vice presidential nominations in 1952, or have a say in naming those slates.

Voter interest naturally turns first in nonpresidential election years to which party is going to win control of the new Congress.

But when it is recalled that 13 of the Nation's Presidents previously served their States as Governors, these races assume a significance that overlaps State borders.

10 State Contests Vital

At least 10 gubernatorial contests will bear watching this time. Not all of them have 1952 angles, of course. But wrapped up in them are veteran political figures, new personalities, including a woman, and intra-party rows such as those in New York and Pennsylvania.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Earl Warren of California, the GOP national nominees in 1948; Frank J. Lausche (D., Ohio), and Chester Bowles (D., Conn.) are battling hard for reelection in a list of elections that in many cases overshadow interest in congressional contests.

All except Bowles are seeking third terms. Two of them—Warren and Bowles—are opposed by men with prominent names. Warren's opponent is James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt. He is seeking his first political office. Bowles, wartime price administrator, is challenged by Representative John Davis Lodge, brother of Senator Lodge and grandson of the late Henry Cabot Lodge, leader in the fight against the League of Nations.

Dewey's Toughest Fight

Representative Walter A. Lynch is battling Dewey in what observers on both sides regard as Dewey's toughest fight of his political life. Republican State Treasurer Don H. Ebright takes on Lausche in Ohio.

The other six State races attracting more than average attention are these:

Pennsylvania—Former Superior Court Judge Robert S. Fine (R.) versus Richardson Dilworth, Philadelphia city treasurer.

Michigan—Gov. G. Mennen Williams (D.) versus Harry F. Kelly (R.) former Governor.

Massachusetts—Gov. Paul A. Dever (D.) versus Arthur W. Coolidge (R.), cousin of the late President Calvin Coolidge.

Arizona—Mrs. Ana Frohmiller (D.), State auditor of 24 years, versus Howard Pyle (R.), Phoenix radio executive.

Maryland—Gov. William Preston Lane, jr. (D.) versus Theodore R. McKeldin, former Mayor of Baltimore.

Wisconsin—Walter J. Kohler (R.), wealthy industrialist and son of the late former Governor, versus Carl W. Thompson (D.), National committeeman.

Altogether, 33 governorships are being filled this year. Maine started things off September 11 by reelecting Gov. Frederick G. Payne, a Republican. Of the other governorships up for decision, 17 now are held by Democrats and 15 by Republicans.

There are now 29 Democratic and 19 Republican Governors. In 1948 the Democrats made a net gain by capturing eight Republican seats. (Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Montana, and Ohio) and losing two (Utah and Washington) to the GOP. In 1946, the Republicans picked up three from the Democrats (Massachusetts, Ohio, Idaho) and lost Colorado to the opposition.

A total of 84 candidates are running for Governor this year—32 Democrats, 29 Republicans, and 23 others. Republicans have offered no candidates against Govs. Herman E. Talmadge in Georgia and Gordon Browning in Tennessee, and candidate James F. Byrnes in South Carolina.

Eleven Democratic and eight Republican incumbents are running again. Four United States Representatives are giving up House terms to seek governorships—Representatives Lynch in New York and Lodge in Connecticut, and Representatives John E. Miles (D., N. Mex.) and Frank A. Barrett (R., Wyo.).

Four Governors are running for the Senate—Frank Carlson (R., Kans.); Earle C. Clements (D., Ky.); James H. Duff (R., Pa.), and John O. Pastore (D., R. I.).

A fifth—Gov. Fred G. Aandahl (R., N. Dak.)—is trying for the House.

The Gallup Poll

Farmers Get Best Treatment By Government, Public Feels

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 1.—Of all major occupation groups in the United States the public thinks the farmer gets the best treatment from Washington, labor the next best, and businessmen the least favorable treatment.

That is the opinion expressed by a representative cross section of American adults interviewed from coast to coast by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

The results are particularly interesting in view of reports that the Truman administration is making a concerted effort to woo small business.

White-collar workers, in the opinion of persons questioned in the survey, get only slightly better treatment from Washington than businessmen.

Here are the results of the survey:

"Which ONE of these groups do you think has received the best treatment from the Government in Washington—farmers, labor, business, or white-collar workers?"

Farmers	38%
Labor	23
White-collar	14
Business	8
Don't know	18

(*Adds to more than 100 percent because some voters named more than one group.)

President Truman himself once acknowledged the fact that his administration had made special efforts to enhance the welfare of labor and the farmer.

In accepting the nomination in 1948 the President said that if farm and labor did not support him in the election race, they would be the "most ungrateful" people in the world.

An interesting sidelight of the survey is that each of the two top groups—farmer and labor—thinks that the OTHER is the one getting the best treatment.

In recent years there has been increasing evidence in public opinion surveys that white-collar workers are gradually drifting away from the Democratic party toward the Republicans.

Certainly the white-collar voters are less Democratic than they once were.

Electronic Sitter Lights Lamp if Baby Cries

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Leason Kington, a University of Buffalo laboratory technician, has developed an electronic baby sitter. The gadget, according to Kington, lights a lamp when baby cries, thus summoning parents home from neighborhood visits.

British to Get Tiny Pocket Ray Counters

LONDON, Nov. 1 (AP).—It looks like a fountain pen but it measures the deadliness of atomic rays.

This tiny pocket device, one of three new radiation counters which soon will be issued to Britain's civil defense corps, is called the individual dosimeter.

The other two are the portable dose rate meter and the contamination meter.

The individual dosimeter comes equipped with a clip for holding in a breast pocket.

The wearer can keep a constant check on whether he is getting too hot with atom rays for continued health. The total dose to which he is exposed is recorded. The reading is taken by holding the small cylinder up to the light and peering into one end. Against the light there is visible a scale reading of radioactivity.

The portable dose rate meter is bigger, about the size of a portable radio receiver. It measures the amount of radioactivity the operator would absorb in one hour in a contaminated area.

The third device, the contamination meter, is for more stationary use. It will be used principally to detect persons contaminated by bomb rays. It is planned to install it in hospitals and cleansing stations.

Sound and Fury

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., Nov. 1 (AP).—Five Grand Junction hunters jumped a herd of 17 deer approximately 35 yards away on Pinon Mesa. When the firing was over, all the deer ran away without a scratch. Three of the five earned expert riflemen badges in the armed forces.

Red Jets in War; Their Source Debated

U. S. FIFTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Nov. 1 (AP).—Enemy jet planes of uncertain identity in their first combat of the Korean war fought a savage but indecisive battle near the Manchurian border today.

None of the swift craft was destroyed. But the renewal of air warfare cost the enemy 11 planes destroyed and seven damaged before the day was done. One United States jet was lost to enemy antiaircraft fire.

Three enemy Yak propeller-driven fighters were shot down in dog fights earlier in the day. Eight other planes were destroyed on the ground and seven were damaged in a strafing of the border air field at Sinuiju.

The appearance of the enemy jets left American Air Force staff officers asking these questions:

Were they the latest known Russian-type jets — MIG-15s — which can outspeed any United States jet plane in Korea? Who flew them and where did they come from—a hidden base in North Korea, a base in nearby Manchuria or a more distant base in Siberia?

A headquarters' spokesman declined comment. But a staff officer scouted the possibility that the jets could have flown from any enemy base left in North Korea. He pointed out the Manchurians had a base near Antung, across the border only 9 miles from Sinuiju.

The officer said a flight of 16 United States jets over Sinuiju late in the afternoon saw "several strange jets doing acrobating over Antung field." They showed no signs of wanting to come across the border.

One returning pilot said the enemy fliers seemed to be tempting the American jets to come across the border and fight. The United States flight obeyed orders and kept to its side of the frontier.

The enemy jets were intercepted by six American slower, propeller-driven Mustangs who were looking for enemy craft reported en route to strafe United States Twenty-fourth Division troops.

In the brief ensuing dogfight no plane on either side was shot down but Mustang pilots later said they believed they had damaged two of their attackers.

Earlier in the day three Yaks were shot down near Sinuiju. Two of them fired on unarmed T-6 American observation planes which called for help. Four responding Mustangs brought down two of six Yaks in dogfights. Later one of four B-26s knocked down one of two Yaks which attacked the light bombers during a bombing run west of Sonchon, 35 miles southeast of Sinuiju.

U. S. raids then put out of action all 15 planes located this morning on Sinuiju airstrip.

The airfield was so badly wrecked that when visited later in the day it was considered no longer worth attacking.

Air Force headquarters made no official disclosure that the six Mustang pilots had identified the markings of the six jets which attacked them.

Tibet Cabinet Splits Over Resistance

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—The Tibetan cabinet has split on the question of resisting the Chinese Communist invasion and plans to mobilize the little army of the boy Dalai Lama have been blocked, frontier advices said today.

Khungo Surkhang Depon, a member of the Tibetan cabinet now in the Indian frontier city of Kalimpong, was quoted as saying that a strong pro-Chinese element opposed resistance.

The 15-year-old Dalai Lama, spiritual and temporal ruler of the Himalayan country, his 73-year-old regent Taktra Rimpoche and other members of the cabinet who are not pro-Chinese are assembling a vast caravan of mountain yaks and mules in readiness for flight from Lhasa, the capital, dispatches said the Communists advanced westward through the winter snows along the silk caravan route from China.

The invaders were last reported about 150 miles from Lhasa.

It was announced here that Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, who is also India's external affairs minister, had sent a second note of protest to the Chinese Communist government in Peiping against the invasion.

Rent Increases Awarded For 95 Apartment Units

A 5.62 percent rent increase for 95 apartment units at the Diplomat, 2420 16th st. nw., was recommended yesterday by District Rent Control Examiner William F. Mansfield. His action is final unless protest is made to the District Rent Control Examiner by November 11.

Rents now range from $46.50 to $81.50 a month. With the increase they would run from $51.50 to $90.50. The owners, Herbert Harvey, Inc., had asked for a 9.94 percent increase to make up for increased taxes and operating costs of the last 10 years.

Navy to Call 31,000 From Reserves

The Navy announced yesterday it will call up 31,000 enlisted reserves and an undisclosed number of reserve officers during the first half of 1951 to man its expanded fleet.

An additional 5000 enlisted reserves will be recalled each month following June, 1951. Almost all men with little or no active service will be sent to "boot camp" when called.

Beginning next July 1, the Navy will release each month about 5000 of the enlisted reserves called up since Korea. The Navy also plans to muster out officers pressed into service involuntarily at the rate of 1500 a month starting in October, 1951. Some will have served 15 months, others up to 21 months.

Largely Petty Officers

The Navy said about half the enlisted men called to duty in the first six months of 1951 will be petty officers. The rest will be nonrated men in low pay grades who have had at least six months' training.

Most of the officers to be called during the remainder of this fiscal year and thereafter will be from the lower ranks—for the most part recent college graduates who have had no active duty. Except in an all-out emergency, a spokesman said, it is not planned to call involuntarily any captains, commanders, warrant officers, civil engineers for Seabee assignment, officers over age in grade, or officers in any rank with special qualifications in law, public information, intelligence, communication security, hydrography. Nor is the recall of line officers specialists in such fields as athletic instructors, educators, postal, and civil administration contemplated.

Doesn't Rely on Draft

The Navy made clear that it plans to rely on reserves and volunteers—and not the draft—to keep its crews up to strength. It said all reserves should look for active duty calls if and when the President or Congress declares "a new emergency" requiring full mobilization.

Scheduled for recall in January, February and March—and by inference in the following three months—will be enlisted reserves in the following classifications:

Chief petty officers in the ratings of instrumentman, teleman, communications technician, personnel man, storekeeper, ship's serviceman, journalist, draftsman, machinery repairman, I. C. electrician, pipe fitter, construction electrician's mate, driver, builder, steelworker and utilities man.

Petty officers, first, second and third class in the following ratings: Quartermaster, torpedoman's mate, gunner's mate, instrumentman, teleman, communications technician, personnel man, storekeeper, disbursing clerk, commissaryman, ship's serviceman, journalist, draftsman, musician, machinist's mate, machinery repairman, boilerman, metalsmith, damage controlman, patternmaker, molder, construction electrician's mate, driver, mechanic, builder, steelworker, utilities man, hospital corpsman, dental technician.

Nonrated personnel in seaman, construction man, airman, hospital man, dental man and stewards man categories.

Waves in the ratings of teleman, communications technician, personnel man, storekeeper, disbursing clerk and dental technician.

A limited number of men in various ratings who are qualified in submarines.

Boettiger Cremated On Wedding Anniversary

John Boettiger, who plunged to his death from a New York hotel Tuesday, was cremated yesterday—on his wedding anniversary—at Ferncliff Cemetery, Hartsdale, N. Y.

Boettiger, 50, a newspaperman and former son-in-law of the late President Roosevelt, hurled himself from a seventh-floor suite in a New York hotel apparently because of nervous depression over business losses and work problems.

Chinese Among Attackers

The blow followed four days of determined attacks by Communist forces, including considerable numbers of Chinese.

The U. S. Twenty-fourth Division's spearhead nearest the border moved ahead as Russian-made jet fighter planes made their debut in support of Red forces. Six jet planes fought inconclusively with slower, propeller-driven Mustangs, then broke off the engagement.

East of Unsan on the curving, 250-mile front, North Korean and Chinese Reds put up spotty resistance. While they struck fiercely in some places, they vanished at other points. They dropped out of sight for no apparent reason before South Koreans on the north central front, and they attacked the U. S. Seventh Division without success in the northeast.

On the northwest, a column of the U. S. Twenty-fourth Division thrust to Charyongwan, 19 air miles southeast of the border at its nearest point and 22 air miles southeast of Sinuiju. Sinuiju is just across the Yalu River from the Manchurian city of Antung, where the Chinese Reds maintain a large air base.

Sinuiju Airfield Strafed

Sinuiju's own air field was savagely strafed by United States jets whose pilots reported at least eight enemy planes destroyed.

The column met only light resistance after it beat back fierce Communist counterattacks along the Chong River, 7 miles east of Charyongwan.

Overhead, Communist jets, perhaps streaking from Manchurian bases, were driven off by slower United States Mustang fighter planes. Neither side lost any planes in the brisk clash but three Russian-made Yak planes of the piston-engine type were shot down in dog fights over the same area earlier Wednesday. An F-80 jet was shot down by Red anti-aircraft fire as it pressed the attack on the Sinuiju airfield.

Eastward another column of the Twenty-fourth Division reached the village of Paegun, 35 miles south of the Manchurian border. This was a 5-mile advance.

Red Force Beyond Paigun

A spokesman for the United States Eighth Army said a Red force of undetermined strength lay beyond Paegun. The Reds were reported equipped with self-propelled guns and automatic weapons.

On the Twenty-fourth's east flank Republic of Korea and United States forces still were battling to repulse strong Communist counterattacks.

A United States First Corps spokesman said the First Regiment of the United States First Cavalry Division had relieved the ROK Eighth Division southeast of Unsan, 30 miles due east of the Twenty-fourth Division at Kusong. He said the Americans were under strong attacks.

The ROK Eighth and Sixth Divisions were chopped up in a powerful Red counterpush in a rough triangle marked by Unsan, Onjong and Huichon—some 50 miles south of the Yalu River frontier.

The Red triangle was regarded by intelligence officers in Tokyo as the keystone of the Communist border defense. How many men they had poured into the area apparently was undetermined.

Gen. Paik Sun Yup, a ROK Second Corps commander, estimated at least one Chinese Communist division was in action in that sector plus North Korean remnants.

The South Korean First Division was hit by a tank-led Communist column northwest of Unsan.

On the north central front, elements of the South Korean Third Division advanced four miles north of Sudong, some 16 miles south of the big Changjin power reservoir against surprisingly light resistance. Some guessed that the Chinese were short of ammunition.

A NICKEL IS STILL THE PRICE TO PAY FOR COKE

Year in, year out, through wars and depressions, through good times and bad, the price of Coca-Cola has always been a nickel—the quality has always been the same. Today, in spite of continually rising production and distribution costs, you can still get Coke for 5¢ a bottle, 25¢ a carton, $1.00 a case. We think that's a mighty big value in refreshment.

Why is Nehru's face RED?

WHEN THE INDIAN PRIME MINISTER set himself up as mediator between East and West in the Korean war, he was hailed by liberals all over the world.

Today Nehru is a confused and disgruntled man whose miscalculations have embarrassed him before the entire world. The Chinese Reds invaded Tibet, gateway to India, and limited their intervention in Korea.

The real story back of Nehru's misguided attempts, and the inside story of the man responsible for them, are told with dramatic clarity in an exclusive dispatch by correspondent Edward Weintal in today's NEWSWEEK.

THERE'S IMPORTANT, EXCITING READING IN Newsweek.

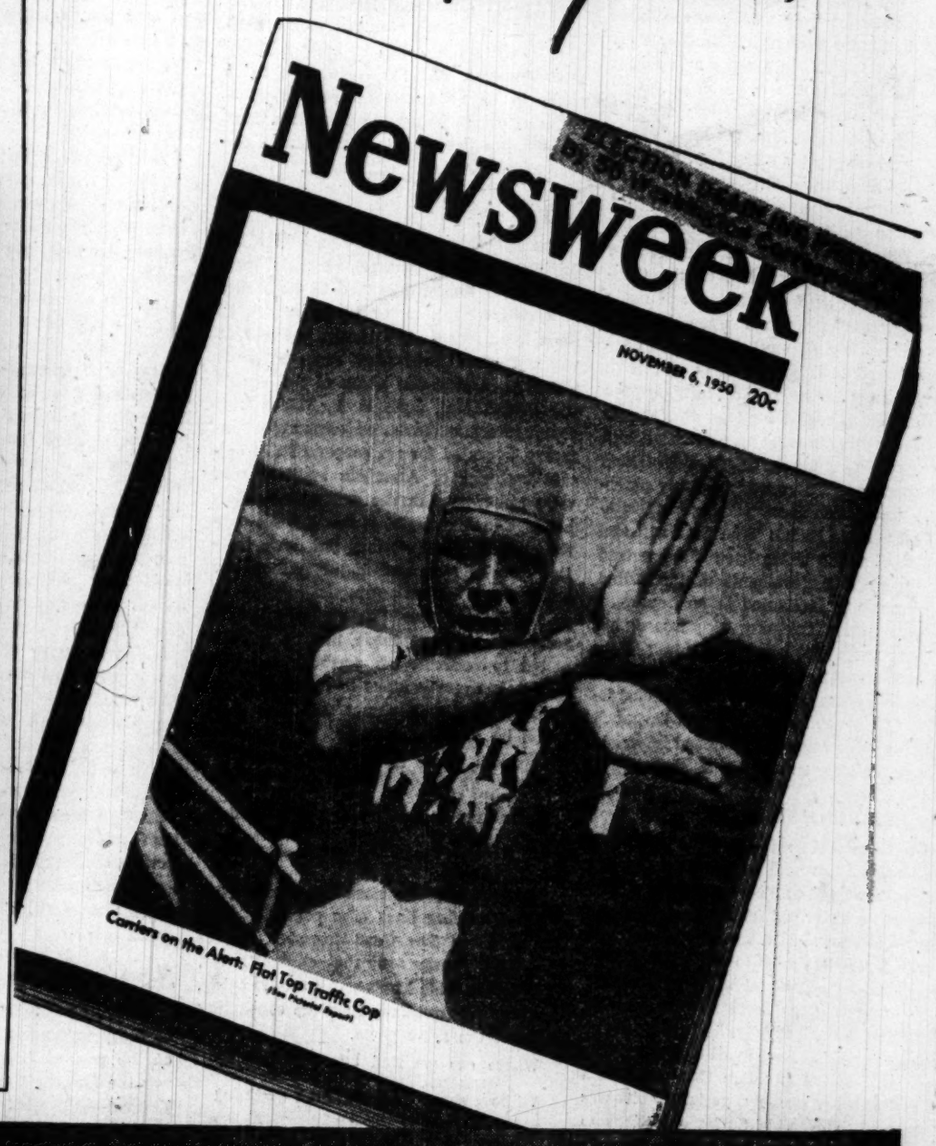
Out Today—20¢



WHERE does the chemical industry stand today? Do we have enough chemicals to fight another major war? Have we even enough for peacetime production? Every man and woman who makes—or uses—war or peacetime products should read the detailed factual report in today's NEWSWEEK.

HOW well is the Army caring for its wounded in the face of a severe shortage of doctors? Army Surgeon General Raymond W. Bliss, just returned from Korea, brings an astonishing and cheering picture—reported in detail in today's NEWSWEEK.

WHAT would "push-button" warfare mean to the U. S.? Are we ahead of the Russians, or behind them? K. T. Keller has been appointed to head up our whole guided missile program. Read about his job and his background in today's NEWSWEEK.

The President

The whole country, irrespective of party, will rejoice at the escape of the President from assassination. For this good fortune let us all do honor to the heroic presidential guard who was killed and the other two who were wounded in resisting the attempt on Mr. Truman's life. The President himself was a model of courage. At his talk in Arlington shortly after the incident he seemed quite composed, and nobody in the audience could have imagined, listening to his simple and effective tribute to Sir John Dill, that anything untoward had just happened to him. He even ad libbed, and from the heart.

The audacity of this apparently organized plot is without parallel in modern American history. One must go back to the murder of Lincoln for a similar situation; there have been other assassinations and attempted assassinations, but by crackpots with no political implications. One result of the affair is to show not only that the President is well and faithfully guarded, but that this protection is vitally necessary—and that the Blair House is too accessible to be really safe. Mr. Truman is the most carefree of Presidents, impatient of the shadowing which he has to put up with. His fortunate escape is a lesson that, however much he may chafe at the restrictions of his office, the Chief Executive cannot afford to take chances.

Sir John Dill

Field Marshal Sir John Dill, to commemorate whom an equestrian statue was unveiled yesterday at the Arlington National Cemetery, was a person who conformed to the Confucian ideal of the "superior man." He was the soul of propriety. His manners were as distinguished as his handsome presence. In small things as in big, he was considerate. He was as much a natural diplomat as a gallant soldier. He was dying for 12 months or so before his demise in 1944, being kept alive by constant blood transfusions, but you would never have known it, for he went about his duty with undimmed fidelity. This is the man whom it was an honor to honor yesterday. Our national cemetery is the richer for his earthly remains, and it is good to have a statue, provided by his many friends in the Capital, to mark the spot.

Sir John Dill came to Washington in 1941 as Mr. Churchill's personal representative. When America declared war, he became senior British representative on the Combined Chiefs of Staff Committee, and made an instantaneous impress upon his colleagues, notably General Marshall. General Marshall testified yesterday to Dill as an architect of harmony. To a lofty purpose he combined a genius for teamwork, never forcing anything, relying on persuasion, and then accepting compromise in a selfless spirit of cooperation. There was no empty phrasing in the citation accompanying his Distinguished Service Medal: "The good will and concert of action which have characterized the combined achievements of the Allied forces must be attributed in an important measure to his integrity of purpose, his freedom from prejudice and his selfless devotion to the common cause, together with the warm humanity which characterized all his actions." It is not too much to say that Sir John Dill is etched imperishably in the affections of his associates.

U. N. Showdown

The General Assembly's action in extending Trygve Lie's term as Secretary General (of which we took note prematurely yesterday) was a bitter pill for the Soviet delegation to swallow. In other circumstances it would have been wise to heed Mr. Vishinsky's plea for consideration of the minority view respecting the Secretary Generalship; the office should, ideally, be held by someone acceptable at least to all the major powers. But in the situation that confronted the General Assembly yesterday it was necessary to override Soviet objections to Mr. Lie. For Mr. Lie had become the symbol of United Nations integrity in opposing Communist aggression in Korea.

Russian opposition to Mr. Lie was based solely on his conduct during the Korean crisis. The U. N. majority which sought his reelection in the Security Council and which, after failing to obtain it there because of a Soviet veto, forced an extension of his term in the General Assembly felt—and quite properly, we think—that to replace him at this time would have been to repudiate the stand he took on Korea. The issue could neither be dodged nor compromised. It was, indeed, an issue which the Russians created. And the defeat they were compelled to suffer in the Assembly yesterday was, in point of fact, but a reflection of the defeat which their strategy of force suffered on the Korean battlefields. Let us hope now that the wounds will heal.

SHAPE Deferred

The disappointment over the blank which the Defense Ministers drew when they met to sign and seal SHAPE, the diminutive for Supreme Headquarters of the Allied Powers in Europe, is widespread. Climax turned to anticlimax. The conditions that the French set as a prerequisite simply could not be met by the other signatories of the Atlantic Pact. Mr. Moch did not come to the meeting in any negotiating mood. He had an ironclad frame of reference, set for him by the cabinet backed by the Assembly, and he presented it like an ultimatum. It was challenged by another representative, Britain's Mr. Shinwell, who has somewhat the same parliamentary manner as Mr. Moch. As for the rest, the Scandinavians were particularly chagrined, for the French plan—to keep the Atlantic frontier at the Rhine so as to dispense with German troops—would leave them in the lurch. The United States and Canada were content to possess their souls in patience, thanks to the example of General Marshall.

Perhaps a little reflection upon what the United States and Canada offered in the way of a security guarantee may soften the take-it-or-leave-it attitude of the French. It was a surety bond for France and Germany combined. The offer was a recognition that North America's strategic frontier lies on the Elbe—a recognition that would take shape in the posting of a certain number of North American divisions in Europe and the appointment of a United States commander of a continental army, including Germans. The French might also ponder not only the loss of time, when time is of the essence, but a possible loss of momentum and even interest among the American people. To be sure, our need is great, but the French need is greater. Public opinion in this country so far is unanimously back of the Administration in a decision which is perhaps the most significant in American history. But it is doubtless realized that a strategy dependent upon a common effort is bound to fail and thus imperil home security if self-help does not match help. For this reason Americans may be expected to approve the holding up of the announcement on a supreme commander.

Why the United States wants to coopt Germans is clear in the premises. To accept the French plan and withdraw the line to the Rhine would be to push the Germans into Russian arms. The French, of course, would not be happy over this risk, but they feel that the way to enlist the Germans in the Atlantic community is first of all to get them pooled in the coal-steel combination which bears the sign of the Schuman Plan. In other words, they want a firm guaranty from the Germans before they accept the firm guaranty of North America and the other participants in the North Atlantic Alliance. This newspaper agrees that the Schuman Plan is quintessential in the quest for European unity, and hopes that from now on the Administration will press the negotiators so as to insure success. There must be no pique over French intransigence, for the Schuman Plan is good in itself, apart altogether from the connection that the French see in it with a decision to unite the Allies in their military establishments. At the same time there ought to be no relaxation in a simultaneous effort to bring the French around to what has become the conviction of the rest of the Atlantic community.

No Dice

You may have read or heard how the British army captured a place called Chongju in North Korea, described in dispatches as a railroad and motor road junction of some importance. Apparently, however, it was not taken until after some stubborn fighting. And at one phase of the assault the British Maj. John E. F. Willoughby, commanding an advanced company of infantry, appealed for the cooperation of certain batteries of American artillery that were somewhere in the general neighborhood. The Americans, it seems, were only too pleased to oblige; they put down their fire precisely where Major Willoughby asked that it be put down.

So delighted was the major with the accuracy of this response, that he felt impelled to transmit his personal and professional congratulations to the artillerists. Picking up the microphone of his field radio, he recited:

> I wonder, by my troth, what thou and I
> Did till we loved? were we not weaned till then?
> But sucked on country pleasures childishly?
> Or snorted we in the seven sleepers' den?

Now those, as we need not remind you, are the opening lines of a poem by John Donne called The Good-Morrow. The appropriate answer in the circumstances, echoing the same hands-across-the-sea spirit, would, of course, have been the concluding lines of the same poem.

> Where can we find two better hemispheres,
> Without sharp North, without declining West?
> Whatever dies was not mixt equally;
> If our two loves be one, or thou and I
> Love so alike that none do slacken, none can die.

But there was no response at all. Major Willoughby repeated the words. And then after some silence he heard the voice of the American artillery commander.

> I hear you loud and clear but do not understand your message. Please say it all again.

But at that point the major seems to have given up the game, and to have transmitted his compliments in stereotyped, army regulations prose.

Well, it may be another example of how poorly English literature is taught nowadays in our American schools; but our own opinion is that Major Willoughby was overdoing it, and had only himself to blame. The probabilities are that if he had been content to say, "Where have you been all my life?"—which was just about all that Donne was saying with considerably more verbosity—he would have been understood right away.

Dalai Lama

The 15-year-old Dalai Lama, with or without the Regent, seems to be contemplating a getaway to India, rather than face the Chinese Communists if and when they arrive in Lhasa. There is a mystery about the Communists' intention. Are they going to run the Forbidden Land, or do they wish merely to assert their paramountcy? The Tibetans, when they can get away with it, have a habit of treating the Chinese Amban, or High Commissioner, just like any other diplomat. This treatment always rankles with the Chinese representative, whose shingle in Lhasa, when he is there, always bears the proud device "High Commissioner of the Chinese protectorate over Tibet." The Chinese purpose this time is not declared, and all that is known is that Peking has spurned India's good offices, peremptorily ordered a Tibetan delegation to Peking, and ordered its soldiers on the march to the Tibetan capital. The Dalai's appeal to India seems to have fallen on deaf ears, though he is assured of asylum, for India is an historic refuge for the God-King.

Tibet has always reflected within herself the divisions of the great powers over Tibet. Successive Dalais have generally been pro-British, or, as the Tibetans would regard it, progressive. Opposing the Dalai is the Panchen, or Tashi, Lama, who of late years has had an orientation toward China, and stands for the old order. The exact relation between the two perhaps could be defined only by a Tibetan. There can be no doubt about it that the Dalai is supreme as temporal ruler; it is the difference in spiritual power that is baffling. Many members of the sect of lamaistic Buddhism, the religion of Tibet, insist that the Panchen is the Supreme Being, and they are chiefly Mongols. Others give him co-authority with the Dalai in the religious realm, and, judging from the incipient war between the two, this would seem to be the correct rendering.

At any rate, the Dalai rules the roost in both spiritual and temporal matters in present-day Tibet, for no acknowledged reincarnation of the Panchen is around. The office has been vacant for 13 years because the stars had designated three candidates for the succession. One is in Chinese territory, and the Chinese Nationalists tried in vain to introduce him into Tibetan territory. He may have been "treated" by the Chinese Communists for introduction as their candidate, and, perhaps, is right now in the train of the invading soldiery.

Fact And Innuendo

The newsletter Counterattack, which asserts that it presents "facts to combat communism" and last June published the book called Red Channels, has given space in its latest issue to denials by three of its victims. This was done, says the publication, "in the interests of fair play" and has the deceptive appearance of a sporting gesture. In point of fact, however, it affords no comfort to a person unjustly included in the Red Channels list. Charges against reputable persons make headlines; denials never catch up with them. And in the case of entertainers, there is no way to repair a damaged reputation.

The technique of Red Channels is to present selected facts and let the implications speak for themselves. It is a lethal technique. One may do incalculable injury, for example, by reporting the fact that a respected minister of the gospel was seen at a hotel on a certain evening in the company of a lady not his wife. The fact may be irrefutable; but it may also be grossly misleading if the minister's wife was also present and if the occasion was, say, a public meeting to raise funds for his church. Red Channels is full of this kind of fact out of context. It reports, sometimes quite accurately, that an actress appeared in behalf of an organization now considered a Communist front, neglecting to point out that her appearance was made at a time when the organization was not taboo and on an occasion sponsored by a long roster of eminently respectable Americans

Moreover, many of Red Channels' facts are derived from sources no more reliable than The Daily Worker or witnesses before the Un-American Activities Committee. Strung on a thread of innuendo, they convey in some instances a sinister impression that is altogether unwarranted. Their subjects then become "controversial personalities" without so much as a hearing. Counterattack merely adds insult to the injury by setting itself up as a tribunal to hear the pleas of those struck down by its offspring, Red Channels.

Sane Halloween

Maybe it was more maturity on the part of the youngsters and more responsibility on the part of their parents, or maybe it was the friendly presence of droves of policemen—but whatever the reason, the Washington area enjoyed the quietest Halloween on record. There were witches and goblins and spooks aplenty, to be sure, but most of them were satisfied with minor tribute in the form of treats, and what tricks were played were mostly confined to applications of soap. The absence of vandalism on this eve traditionally noted for destructiveness is something of an achievement, and the thanks of the community go to the civic organizations and others who gave parties to keep juvenile talents occupied.

Recognition Of China

When asked to comment on a statement by Harold Stassen that his administration intends to recognize Red China after the election, President Truman is reported to have replied: "He didn't get that from me. He must have gotten it from Gabrielson" (Republican National Committee chairman).

It will be noted that the President, according to all accounts in the press, didn't categorically deny Harold Stassen's charges. Does this mean that such recognition has, in fact, been agreed upon? Was the trip to Wake Island made to notify MacArthur of this fact?

It is believed that Louis Johnson knew of it and threatened to "spill it" at an American Legion banquet in Los Angeles after he had been fired. According to one account, a White House representative flew all the way to Los Angeles and spent a whole day, before Johnson was to make this speech, convincing him that he should not do so. As a result he was quieted.

But as the old saying goes, "Murder will out." Louis Johnson and Douglas MacArthur were squelched in this matter, but Harold Stassen proclaims it as a fact. It is not denied. Merely the source is impugned by implication. Unless it is denied categorically by the Administration before November 7 next, the American people, in voting to support Democratic members of Congress may well be voting to elect those who will accept this infamy—greater than Yalta—without question. REALIST.

Eisenhower's Position

Now that General Eisenhower has indicated that he would accept, as a soldier, the position of supreme commander of the North Atlantic Pact forces, I wonder how long we will have to wait before one of the Republican Party members raises an anguished howl that it was merely a cheap political trick of President Truman's to rid himself of a formidable opponent in the 1952 political race?

Will Governor Dewey, who took his hat out of the political ring and tossed it in the air for Eisenhower, now regard Eisenhower's military appointment as an occasion for reconsideration of his own refusal to run for President again?

The Republicans had better hurry up and look around for a good man to run in 1952. And while they're at it, they might try to find a program other than the shaky, negative one they now pursue.

Freedom For Albania

In your issue of October 17 I read with distress the article "In Face of Danger" by Marquis Childs. Mr. Childs made a gratuitous categorization concerning my country, Albania. Without dwelling upon the pros and cons of the categorization, "After all, Albania is a primitive country . . ." I should like to comment on Mr. Childs' suggestion that "the United States should insist on a Greek-Yugoslav agreement . . ." in order to "make each country better able to resist Moscow," and naturally "to overthrow the Hoxha regime."

This is certainly a realistic point of view, for no one can deny that a country's neighbors play an important role in the life of a state, especially so when this state is seething with hatred for its present form of government. The Albanian questions, however, must not be stated so simply, for it gives comfort to the dupes of Moscow, and instead of weakening, it strengthens the oppressive state of the tyrannical Muscovite Hoxha.

The Albanians have suffered a long time in their efforts to obtain freedom; after each attempt they emerged with their territory divided. They will not shed their blood again in order to overthrow the Communist regime while their neighbors have ulterior motives. If Albania is to be liberated and if the Albanians are to be won over to our side, it is necessary to present the problem in a clear and unequivocal manner. Efforts should be made to return Albania to the side of liberty and justice and the country should emerge an independent, democratic, and integrated ethnic unit.

For those who understand that area of Europe it is clear that the Albanian question must be solved without ulterior motives; in order successfully to release her from Communist domination, for the good of the Albanian people, and for the good of her neighboring countries which today live under constant threat from Moscow.

Battle Of Tibet

Many pictures came out of Hollywood concerning various phases of the last great war, but one of the most memorable ones was A Walk in the Sun, dealing with a small part of the long, hard Italian campaign.

One of the characters in the movie each day would predict to his comrades (better use the word buddies) that in 1962 we would be fighting the battle of Tibet. As I read my morning Post I began to wonder. Six months ago we didn't know we would be fighting in Korea. Twelve years from now, who knows, we may be clinging desperately to some mountain monastery in Tibet.

Religion in Politics

Drew Pearson, during his Sunday evening broadcast on October 29, made reference to the smear campaigns being waged by candidates for political office all across the country. He singled out the Ohio battle, stating that some Republicans were waging a campaign of religious intolerance by asking voters not to support Mr. Ferguson because of his religion which is Catholic. In my opinion, this charge was manufactured from whole cloth.

I telephoned Mr. Pearson to question him on the source of his information. After a long wait, Mr. Pearson answered. I spoke to him about his broadcast saying that I was surprised and disturbed about his statement and charge concerning the Ohio senatorial campaign. I stated that we in Ohio are broadminded and the voters are interested in a candidate's qualifications for the office he is seeking and never question his religious affiliations.

I also said that this was a serious charge and averred that religion should have no place in American politics. Mr. Pearson heartily agreed with me. He said that he had been reluctant to use this charge but that he got his information from Southern Ohio where some Baptist minister was sending out pamphlets or had started a whispering campaign.

In my opinion, this canard of bringing religious prejudice into play in the present campaign is the work of the PAC. They are consistently seeking new lows in their frenzied efforts to elect Mr. Ferguson.

U. N. Flag

I notice that the National Guard Association has followed the lead of such "stalwarts" as the D. A. R. and Representative Clare Hoffman in attacking the flag for whom many red-blooded Americans are now dying in Korea.

Certainly if this flag is worth the shedding of good American blood, it deserves the loyalty both of the association, whose members are sworn to serve their country and of the legislator who is paid by those same Americans who are shedding blood for that United Nations flag.

Reuther On Installment Credit

J. A. Livingston says (October 25) that Walter Reuther's reason for protesting the Federal Reserve Board restrictions of installment credit and housing credit is that the resulting unemployment of auto workers may cause them to quit the union and stop paying dues. This warped treatment of what Reuther actually said calls for correction.

Reuther assured Symington that our union is prepared to cooperate to the fullest whenever defense contracts require curtailment of automobile production. But these credit regulations slash into civilian production without regard to the timing or volume of defense requirements. This, says Reuther, is the meat ax approach to the complex problem of balancing civilian and military production.

Before World War II Reuther was the first to demand—in August 1940—that auto plants be converted to plane production. The industry said no to this and the Government said nothing. Production of cars continued through 1941 costing many vital months of plane, tank and gun production in auto plants.

Ignoring this record, Livingston says that the UAW-CIO squawked to President Roosevelt when the order to stop auto production was issued. This, if true, might support Livingston's case against Reuther, but it happens to be false.

Reuther makes the point that these credit restrictions hit hardest at people with least income. Low-income families are forced out of the market, while wealthy families can find the cash to buy all they want. Like the new tax law, this credit device imposes the bulk of the sacrifice on those least able to stand it.

Reuther pointed also to the failure of the Federal Reserve Board to check the rapid rise in bank loans to business. It has taken and plans to take only token measures to restrict this inflationary financing of swollen inventories. It has not renewed its request for "special reserves" legislation which, three years ago, it told Congress was absolutely necessary to control bank credit.

Reuther proposes that labor and management in the industries affected be brought together to consult with Government officials for curtailing civilian production to meet defense needs, on plans for converting plants to defense production without delay so that maximum employment and output can be maintained, and on the need for price ceilings to control inflation and for allocation orders to assure fair sharing of sacrifices. Above all, he said, we should find out what steps are necessary to expand the Nation's basic productive capacity.

This is a reasonable, intelligent, and public-spirited approach to problems which affect all of us and will be with us for many years. Why Livingston imputed a personal motive to it, and falsified history to make his case, is for him to explain. I don't get it.

Defense And Delinquency

By Malvina Lindsay

Storm Cellar Measures

IN CHECKING up our costs of rearmament we should probably include another wave of juvenile delinquency. Shifts in home life, family breakups, hasty marriages, emotional strain and uncertainty may help swell this to a crest.

Moreover, children's present troubles with the law seem to be increasing in many places. Judge Edith H. Cockrill of Juvenile Court recently warned of a coming shortage of law officers and psychiatrists to take care of the overload of delinquents.

Hence a recently completed 10-year-study of why children get in trouble, one of the most extensive yet made, has special value at this time. It was conducted by a husband and wife team, celebrated in this field, Prof. Sheldon Glueck and Dr. Eleanor Touroff Glueck of the Harvard Law School, which sponsored the undertaking. Several foundations financed it. Findings are based on a study of 500 delinquent boys in the slum areas of Boston and a group of 500 boys from the same areas who did not tangle with the law.

The results of this study have a familiar sound—it is the quality of a child's home life that determines his behavior—not what type of neighborhood he lives in, whether he has a high or low I.Q., whether he comes from a large or small family, or one of conflicting cultures. Recently smaller studies have been arriving at the same conclusion. And psychologists and pediatricians have been saying much the same thing.

THE HARVARD study found that if a child's home life was adequate, the chances were only three in 100 he would turn out a delinquent, but if family life was unsatisfactory, his chances of becoming a delinquent were 98 in 100.

All of this is a modernized version of the favorite cliche of moralizers, "the parents are to blame"—always uttered with the insinuation that the parents did not sternly teach "right from wrong." But inadequate parents, according to the Glueck study, showed up chiefly as: the father whose discipline was lax, or overstrict, or erratic—not firm and kindly; the mother who left the boy to his own devices and did not help him to make healthy use of his leisure time; the father or mother who rejected the boy emotionally; and the parents who made home "just a place to hang your hat."

This leads back to the big question: How get "adequate" parents? How recruit them—as well as soldiers and factory workers—for the strains and demands ahead?

The answer is not so simple as demanding that all mothers stay home, or even that churches and schools organize more training classes in parenthood—needed though these may be. The Gluecks well recognize what a basic, stupendous task is involved in forestalling delinquency via the adequate parent approach. They warn that little progress can be expected "until family life is strengthened by a large-scale, continuous, pervasive program designed to bring all the resources of mental hygiene, social work, education and religious and ethical instruction upon the central issue."

AT LEAST it is something that we seem to be focusing our eye on the "central issue." It is also something that we have done with the old concept of parental omniscience by instinct, and that great numbers of parents in all humility are seeking knowledge to make themselves more "adequate."

But even more knowledge is not enough. More human beings with healthy personalities to bring to the job of family life and parenthood must be developed. Dr. Antonia Wenkart, in a recent lecture on "The Career Mother," before the Auxiliary Council to the Association for the Advancement of Psychoanalysis in New York, asked the question: "How can a mother be instrumental in securing the healthy development of her child?" "The answer," she said, "is as simple as this—if she has succeeded in her own healthy development. You can even put this in the form of an equation; you can give only what you have; or you can never give more than you have without going bankrupt."

Thus the road to preventing delinquency winds ever further back. Today homes and schools are equipping mentally and emotionally the parents of the 1970s. Yet emergency measures also are needed to help those parents who didn't get the right start themselves and thus are handicapped in giving this to their children. Under the pressures of a defense economy their failures are likely to be more acute. Also some storm cellar measures should be under consideration for the children who will be without parental shield from the rising social clouds on the horizon.

Fairfax Government

We have never seen so many good natured politicians in Fairfax County. They all wear a peculiarly good humored smile. Some grin for the executive form of government, others for the manager form.

As a matter of fact Omer Hirst (promoting the county manager form) thinks he has his coon planted in the highest limb of the tallest tree in the county. When election comes around he will find with Colonel Crockett that there is no coon there, but that he has grinned all the bark off and left the knot perfectly smooth.

Germans Reported Fearful Of More Betrayals by Leaders

(This is the fourth in a series of five articles on conditions in Western Germany. The author has just returned from a journey to Bonn, Berlin, Munich, Dusseldorf and other population centers, where she interviewed political leaders, industrialists, social workers and labor leaders to gain an insight into German views on economic conditions, European defense and resistance to communism. The fifth article in this series will be published Friday.)

By Agnes E. Meyer
Post Reporter

The German people lack faith in their government because their leaders have always betrayed them and it looks as if these same leaders are in a position to do it again. They lack in money because they have been through two inflations and now prices are rising sharply while wages are stationary. They lack confidence in themselves because nobody in the past or present has ever tried to develop independent thinking among the mass of the population. The educational system has always been used to encourage their obedience and subjection.

Above all, the men who returned from the battlefields and their families are permanently fed up with militarism. They abhor it. The older people yearn for security and peace. The younger ones are struggling to get an education and a job so that they can marry and live a decent if modest life for the first time since they were born.

Lethargic About Reds

It is therefore not surprising that the immediate response of the German people to the vital need of defending their country is one of revulsion. They hate communism more violently than any other people for they saw the stark poverty in Russia during the invasion and the incredibly barbaric behavior of the Russian troops when they in turn invaded Germany. Yet many of the employed and unemployed said to me lethargically: "Let the Russians come. We couldn't be any worse off."

Actually they don't really mean this. Nor do they mean their changeable, contradictory reactions to the need for military defense.

When it looked as if the Big Three (the Prime Ministers of France, Great Britain and the United States) were going to decide for the immediate recruitment of German military units, they reproached me as follows: "First you say we are a dangerous people who need to be demilitarized and now you want to put us back into a uniform because you need us."

Favor U. S. Commander

Yet when France objected to German rearmament, some of these same people were disappointed and said they would like to enlist under an American commander but not under their own discredited generals. Even our sudden military victories in Korea met with sarcasm although it raised their feeling of security. "Don't let MacArthur command the European forces," they said. "We are in the front line trenches and though he always ends with a victory, he always begins with defeat."

In short, the Germans are so oppressed by the immediate difficulties of life, by overcrowded living conditions, shortage of housing, low wages and unemployment, huge relief rolls and millions of refugees, most of whom lead pitiable existences, that they are introspective, self-centered and scarcely know what they want.

Add to these outward hardships the fact that heretofore the German masses have always been told what to do and what to think and that Hitler was merely the supreme expression of their need for authoritarian leadership, and it can be readily understood why they feel utterly lost in a world that offers them for the first time no acceptable father-symbol.

They are still so torn between the love of obedience and the desire for self-reliance that an emotional anarchy prevails, a kind of mass neurosis, which is kept in check only by the hard realities of everyday life.

George Bernard Shaw, Britain's Greatest Playwright, Is Dead

after suffering a broken left thigh in his garden where he was trimming a fruit tree on September 10.

Shaw lapsed into a coma early yesterday morning. A Church of England rector read the church's "commendatory prayer for a sick person at the point of departure" later in the day for the one-time professed atheist.

George Bernard Shaw was one of the greatest dramatists of modern times—and he knew it. The reedy sage of Ayot St. Lawrence, who once crowned himself "dramatic emperor of Europe," never made any secret of his admiration for himself.

As master of the drama, the vegetarian, teetotaling, non-smoking Shaw considered himself the rightful successor—perhaps even the superior—of Shakespeare. As master of the studied insult he bowed to no man.

Through his application of the needle, the white-bearded Irish pundit became one of the most controversial figures of his era. He delighted in knocking idols from their pedestals.

"The secret of success is to offend the greatest number of people," Shaw once proclaimed. His friend and neighbor, Stephen Winsten, recorded this Shavianism in his 1948 book, "Davis With Bernard Shaw."

Americans were among Shaw's favorite targets. At them he aimed shafts like this:

'Nation of Villagers'

"To rouse their undying devotion, all that is necessary is to hold them up to ridicule. Dickens won them by calling them windbags, swindlers and assassins.

"Sinclair Lewis knocked George Washington off his pedestal, substituted Babbitt and became America's leading author.

"I, myself, have been particularly careful never to say a civil word to the United States. I have scoffed at them as a nation of villagers and defined the 100 percent American as 99 percent idiot.

"But they adore me and will go on doing so until, in a moment of senile sentimentality, I say something nice about them. Then they will suspect me of being only a cheapskate and drop me like a hot potato."

His first visit to the United States was in 1933. While on a world cruise, he stepped ashore on both the West and East Coasts. He made another visit in 1936. "I've made a lot of money out of America in my time," he observed then. "But now—I'm sorry to say—America is getting some out of me."

Shaw claimed to be a Communist in his later years, but if this was so he was a Communist of his own brand.

Unlike other Communists, he blandly tossed off major heresies, such as referring to Karl Marx as ponderously unreadable, and indicating that Communists frequently talked through their hats. But he expressed open admiration for Joseph Stalin and for the Russian Communist experiment.

In his essays—he was an acknowledged master of this form, too—Shaw expounded on Fabian Socialism, a doctrine which called for reorganization of society so that capital would pass from individual and class ownership to the community.

Shaw's essays, however, ranged over a wide field all the way from erudite music criticism to discussions of world politics. In his eighty-eighth year he produced a provocative guide for the human race, which he called "Everybody's Political What's What." It contained discourses on many subjects, including banking, education, marriage and religion, and it also covered the question "Is human nature incurably depraved?"

Wrote 50 Plays

Shaw wrote a number of novels, the best known of which were "Love Among the Artists" and "An Unsocial Socialist."

But Shaw's greatest love was the drama and there lay his greatest fame. His plays never lost their sparkle. He was represented on Broadway with three productions in the 1947-48 season. He received the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1925.

He wrote more than 50 plays. Some, like "Pygmalion," "Major Barbara" and "Caesar and Cleopatra," were adapted for the screen.

Among his better known plays were "Candida," "Man and Superman," "The Doctor's Dilemma," "Androcles and the Lion," "John Bull's Other Island," "Heartbreak House," "Saint Joan of Arc," "Too True to be Good," "Back to Methuselah," "The Millionairess" and "The Apple Cart."

In 1937 Shaw boycotted the coronation of King George VI with this explanation: "As I am by profession a creator of theatrical illusions, these amateur pageants only bore me."

Shaw, at the time 88 years old, once displayed his fury at the British income tax system. He said he had to pay $80,000 a year and that the more he earned the poorer he got.

"If it goes on much longer I shall not have anything to live on at all," he complained. He said he had been transformed from a prosperous playwright into a tax collector working for a small commission. Income tax specialists at the time estimated his earnings at $96,000 a year, and his friends predicted he would leave about a million dollars.

"I want to be thoroughly used up when I die," he once said, "for the harder I work the more I live. I rejoice in life for its own sake. Life is no brief candle to me. It is a sort of splendid torch which I have got hold of for the moment and I want to make it burn as brightly as possible before handing it on to the future generations."

Shaw lived in the picturesque Hertfordshire village of Ayot St. Lawrence, 40 miles from London. He maintained an apartment in London, which he visited occasionally.

Born in Ireland, to an impecunious family, he left school before he was 15. His mother taught music in London and from her Shaw obtained a lasting interest in music. His knowledge of the subject helped him when he was a struggling London journalist.

Long Road to Fame

Shaw was descended from one of the Protestant families that established themselves in Ireland in the eighteenth century. He was born in Dublin, July 26, 1856. At the age of 20 he went to England. His mother had gone there earlier and helped to support him for several years.

GOP Attacks Foreign Policy; Stassen to Answer Truman

By The Associated Press

Republicans trained their big guns on President Truman's foreign policy—in the Far East especially—yesterday, as the President made ready to fire his own campaign barrage next Saturday night.

The GOP National Committee picked Harold E. Stassen, sharp critic of the Truman policies in China and elsewhere in the Far East, to go on the air immediately after the President's broadcast and give the Republican answer.

And GOP National Chairman Guy George Gabrielson declared at Charleston, W. Va., that "the Democratic Administration must share with Communist imperialism the responsobility for the 30,000 known American casualties—so far—in Korea."

Gabrielson's speech followed a Tuesday night broadcast in which Democratic National Chairman William M. Boyle, jr., said Mr. Truman's "quick and bold statesmanship has opened a new chapter in history for this country and for mankind."

Vice President Barkley is expected to enlarge [illegible] theme in a mutual netw[illegible] from Chicago at 1[illegible]y night.

President Tru[illegible]es were reported well along on the five-network radio and television speech which the Chief Executive is to deliver at 10 p. m. Saturday. White House sources indicated the St. Louis speech, an avowed campaign talk, would stress foreign affairs.

Republicans had some trouble lining up a reply to the President. Admittedly short of money, they finally contracted for time—10:30 p. m. Saturday—over a single network, Mutual. That will cost around $15,000, compared with more than $100,000 for the Truman radio-TV time.

Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania, was selected as the speaker after Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who has been ill for months, said he couldn't fill the assignment. Vandenberg has been the GOP's chief spokesman on foreign affairs.

Stassen will reply to the President" from New Haven, Conn., in the State where Republicans are waging an all-out campaign to unseat Democratic Senators McMahon and Benton.

The choice of St. Louis, in President Truman's home state of Missouri, probably was not coincidental, either. Democrats hope to gain a Senate seat there by ousting Republican Senator Donnell.

Republicans must hold the seats they have and take seven from the opposition if they are to get control of the next Senate, and Gabrielson warned in his West Virginia speech that "the chips are down."

"There is just one way to guard against Truman incompetence during the next two years," he said. "That is to vote November 7. Vote for liberty not socialism, for peace not for war, for defense not unpreparedness, for economy not spending, for a real American living standard not inflation."

Senator Taft R., Ohio), campaigning hard for reelection, said the election of a Democratic Congress would amount to "a rubber stamp Congress demanded by Mr. Truman and the (CIO) Political Action Committee."

Taft said in his weekly report to Ohio voters that this would mean "a vote of confidence in (Secretary of State) Acheson and a continued pro-Communist attitude in the foreign policy of the United States."

Taft is being opposed by Ohio State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, who has strong backing from an AFL-CIO-United Mine Workers organization.

Gen. Gorgas, Canal Yellow Fever Hero, In Hall of Fame

NEW YORK, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—Six celebrated Americans were elected today to the Hall of Fame at New York University.

Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, director of the shrine, announced the selection of Susan B. Anthony, champion of women's rights; Dr. William C. Gorgas, Army Surgeon-General who cleared the Panama Canal zone of yellow fever; Woodrow Wilson, twenty-eighth President of the United States, who inspired the League of Nations; Theodore Roosevelt, twenty-sixth President; Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, and Posiah Williard Gibbs, pioneer American mathematical physicist.

Miss Anthony is the eighth woman to receive the honor which is bestowed every five years. The six elected brings the total to 83.

First Arlington Burial for AF Korean Victim

Capt. Ralph N. Kallock, 30, of Braddock, Pa., killed in action in Korea on September 27, will be the first Air Force victim of the conflict to be buried in Arlington Cemetery.

The interment ceremonies, with full military honors, will be at 11 a. m. today at the gravesite between McKinley and McPerson drs. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, air chief of staff, and other high Air Force officials, are expected to attend.

Captain Kallock, a group gunnery officer for the Far East Air Force, was killed while acting as a gunner on a B-26 bomber which crashed on the Japanese mainland during a Korean bombing mission.

He held the Purple Heart, the Air Medal and other decorations for service in World War II, when he was on duty with the Tenth Air Force in the China-Burma-India theater.

Ben-Gurion's Cabinet Gets Confidence Vote

TEL AVIV, Israel, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Premier David Ben-Gurion's new 13-member cabinet received a vote of confidence in the Knesset (Parliament) today after an eight-hour general debate that began last night. The vote was 69 to 4, with two abstentions.

Observers believed Ben-Gurion's new government represented a swing to the right. The leftist Mapam Party and the Communists saw in the addition of Jack Geri as minister of trade and industries, a considerable strengthening of business interests.

The President's Calling List

Lie Voted 3-Year Extension By U. N. Assembly, 46 to 5

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (AP).—The U. N. Assembly today gave Secretary General Trygve Lie three more years in office and a big vote of confidence. It overrode repeated Soviet warnings that Moscow will ignore Lie and refuse to deal with him.

The final vote on extending Lies term to February 2, 1954, was 46 to 5, with seven abstentions. The Russian bloc alone voted against him. The U.N. listed abstentions as Australia, Nationalist China, Egypt, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Syria and Yenen. Haiti was absent and the Sixtieth and newest member, Indonesia, did not vote.

Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky fought to the last to delay action. He accused Warren R. Austin, United States delegate, of trying to rush the issue through the Assembly. He appealed to the delegates to approve a Soviet resolution sending the question back to the Security Council for further talks.

The Russian resolution was rejected. Only nine countries voted for it, 37 against, and 11 abstained.

United Nations rules require that the Security Council make a recommendation to the Assembly, with all five permanent members agreeing to the recommendation. The Assembly then elects the recommended man. The Russians vetoed Lie in the Council and their candidate was not accepted.

Private talks were held, four other persons were considered, but did not receive Security Council approval. Austin then indicated the United States would use its veto to stop other candidates and called for an extension of Lie's term.

Austin said the Russians were trying to punish Lie for taking a strong stand against Communist North Korean aggression. Vishinsky denied this and attacked Lie as a "stooge" for the United States.

The Assembly next turned to the American-backed proposals called "uniting for peace." Approved by the political committee, this would give the Assembly authority to convene within 24 hours in an emergency, and would ask U. N. members to place armed forces in a state of readiness for quick use on call by the Assembly. It also calls for a peace patrol.

Vishinsky, Malik Greet Lie at Soviet Affair

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (AP).—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky was host at a reception tonight for U. N. delegates and among the guests was Secretary General Trygve Lie.

Lie, accompanied by his wife, shook hands cordially with both Vishinsky and Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob A. Malik, then went among other delegates to receive congratulations upon his receiving an extended term of three years today. The reception was held at the Soviet delegation's headquarters on Park ave.

Man, Sought In Killing, Dies After Saying He Would Give Up

LYNN, Mass., Nov. 1 (U.P.).—A 43-year-old, 250-pound gambler wanted for questioning in a Boston gangland slaying collapsed and died today after saying he would surrender to police.

He was Louis (The Pig) Uva, wanted for questioning in the ambush slaying of George R. Killeen, 30, a small-time bookie of South Boston.

Police said Uva died in the palatial home of a man understood to be a relative of a second person police wanted to question about the Killeen slaying. Uva was said to have been suffering from a heart ailment.

Killeen, Uva and the second man were questioned but released after the $1,500,000 robbery of Brink's, Inc., in Boston last January 17.

Killeen was killed and two companions were wounded after being ambushed in Boston's north end.

OF BOOKS AND BRENTANO'S

Some years ago, a number of Senators were cornered in the Capitol by a presumably desperate reporter, and asked what they considered the most important lines of poetry ever penned. The quotes proved little, if anything, about the gentlemen's literary leanings, but did indicate a concern with private human frailties which was possibly reassuring and possibly a little frightening. The winner by a good half-dozen golden throated echoes was "This above all: to thine own self be true . . ." The result may or may not be symptomatic of self-doubt within the constituency, but at any rate represents one more reason for the recent rush on books on psychology here at Brentano's . . . STRATEGY IN POKER, BUSINESS AND WAR ($2.50) is a fascinating new study which is already attracting attention in such divergent circles as the universities, Wall Street and the military. Based upon the behaviour of men around a poker table, it translates the apparently simple strategical concepts of the card game to the market, to war and to the behaviour of man vs. man generally. Stimulating reading for businessmen, politicians, poker-players, Pentagoners, and armchair strategists, by a Fortune editor . . . One of the most readable, persuasive presentations of practical psychology to cross the counters of Brentano's in years is THE MATURE MIND ($2.95). H. A. Overstreet has defined with brilliance and clarity the nature of the mature mind, and offers simple but effective suggestions on how all of us may achieve greater maturity. An easy-to-read, non-technical book which continues the trend away from esoteric jargon . . . Anyone with intellectual curiosity, a hypochondriac aunt or unexplained symptoms will be intrigued by Franz Alexander's PSYCHOMATIC MEDICINE ($4.00). It describes the fundamental concepts of this important science, and presents conclusive results of studies of the incredible influence of emotions on health . . . There are dozens of books about modern marriage on the shelves here at Brentano's, but THE CHALLENGE OF MARRIAGE ($3.50) attacks the institution from a different direction. It lays bare the confusion about sex, love and matrimony arising from the psychological and social factors which mould it so devastatingly . . . STOP AND BROWSE: with DIANETICS ($4.00), the definition of a brand new mental science with some unexpected answers to shock treatment, surgery and analysis; THE HUMAN USE OF HUMAN BEINGS ($3.00), Dr. Norbert Wiener's famous theory of 'cybernetics' applied to human minds, their powers of good and evil, their potentials, their failures; BE YOUR REAL SELF ($2.95), a practical guide to mental and emotional balance, and to happy relations with others.

Catholic Agencies Urged to Aid Illegitimates in Further Ways

Charitable agencies caring for unmarried mothers and their children were called upon yesterday to provide broader services.

The suggestion came from Miss M. Frances Hetznecker, director of social service of the House of Providence in Detroit, a speaker at the thirty-sixth national conference of Catholic Charities and annual meeting of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul.

The convention opened yesterday at the Statler Hotel and will continue through Monday morning.

Miss Hetznecker addressed a discussion group of the Conference of Religious on trends in planning for unmarried mothers.

Among the broader aspects of service which she touched on was the legal status of illegitimates, whose number is estimated at 100 million in the civilized world, she said.

"Would we be willing to exert our influence so that every child would be recognized as the legitimate offspring of its natural parents?" she suggested.

Miss Hetznecker also urged the Religious Sisters to try to promote the universal use of birth registration cards in general hospitals. These may be used to prove identity, age and citizenship, as do birth certificates, but without disclosing confidential birth status, she pointed out.

Miss Hetznecker said the Sisters of the Conference of Religious should be tremendously concerned by the Census Bureau's estimate that 1 out of every 12 children born in the United States is illegitimate, and 40 percent of the unmarried mothers are under 20.

Citing 1948 figures from an American city, she said less than one-third of 2131 children born out of wedlock were born to maternity-home patients. Questioning whether the Catholic Charities groups were reaching the unmarried mothers, she suggested better distribution of information about their services.

Miss Hetznecker questioned whether "we are excusing ourselves from admitting the Negro girl intd group care because we have never rendered that service."

Heading the discussion was Sister Mary Charles, chairman of the Conference of Religious and superintendent of St. James Orphanage, Omaha, Neb. Other speakers were Sister Mary Helen, administrator of St. Anne's Tome, St. Louis, Mo., and Sister Marie Catharine, director of the boarding department, New York Moundl ing Hospital.

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. John O'Grady was given a testimonial luncheon commemorating his thirtieth anniversary as secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities. Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle of Washington and Caesar L. Aiello, chairman president of the Catholic Charities of the District, paid tribute to Msgr. O'Grady.

D. C. Poll Reveals 60 Pct. Never Go to Church

A religious census of the Washington area made public yesterday indicated that 60 percent of the population attends no church.

In a poll conducted by the Washington Federation of Churches among nearly 25,000 persons, results revealed that only 39.4 percent attend any church one or more Sundays a year.

The survey included persons from all major faiths, a federation spokesman said, and could be projected "to give a reliable picture of the total local church-attending situation."

The statistics were released by John Halko, director of the Federation's department of research and planning.

He told members of the Greater Washington Preaching Mission team and staff at a breakfast in the Willard Hotel that the results reveal "nothing new in the actual church picture."

Halko said that 41.6 percent of those questioned claimed a local church affiliation.

Another 9.7 percent declared "back home" ties, he said, which roughly equals the national average of 52 percent of the population.

On the basis of his figures, Halko said there were 900,000 people in Washington area who do not attend any church.

Among the churchgoers, 3.9 percent attend one to five Sundays a year; 7.2 percent, 6 to 25 Sundays; 28.2 percent, 25 to 52 Sundays, Halko said.

The breakdown showed that 41.1 percent of the white population declared local church affiliation along with 48.3 percent of the Negroes.

Church school figures indicated that 89.8 percent of those questioned did not attend.

faith" and "the unknown girl of Nazareth."

The Pope, robed in white and wearing his jeweled miter, spoke "ex Cathedra"—from the chair. By the last previous dogma added to the church creed, in 1870, the Pope is infallible, and cannot err when he speaks in such circumstances on matters of faith and morals.

The assembly included 38 of the church's 53 living cardinals. Among them was Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York.

Representatives of all races—black, white, brown and yellow—and all social classes gathered in the square. From the steps of the basilica the throng stretched to as far as Castel St. Angelo, three-quarters of a mile away on the banks of the Tiber.

One of the most dramatic moments came after the pontiff proclaimed the dogma. He had read pertinent paragraphs of the papal bull and addressed the throng briefly in Italian.

"And now, prostrated, let us devoutly pray," he said.

The Pope knelt. Cardinals, archbishops and bishops knelt with the rest of the crowd. The Pope then recited a prayer he composed to Mary, "the most Holy Mother assumed":

"O immaculate virgin, mother of God and mother of men, we believe with all the fervor of our faith in thy triumphant assumption, in soul and in body, into heaven, where thou art acclaimed queen of all the choirs of the angels and by all the legions of the saints . . .

"Lead us with the gentleness of thy voice to show us one day, after this our exile, Jesus, the blessed fruit of thy womb, O Clement, O Pius, O Sweet Virgin Mary."

Up front in the reserved section were representatives of some 40 nations with which the Vatican has diplomatic relations. There were several special missions that came expressly to represent their countries at the dogma ceremony, among them Ireland, Peru, Dominican Republic, Italy and the provincial government of Quebec.

Behind and to the sides of the Pope's throne stretched the ranks of the Noble Guards and Swiss Guards in colorful uniforms.

Masses were said at three altars in the square before the dogma ceremony began. The sun came up bright after a spell of cool, rainy weather. Many pilgrims had waited in the quare all night.

No Communist disturbances marred the day, as they did briefly when holy doors were opened in five Roman churches last Christmas Eve to begin the holy year—the twenty-fifth in Catholic history.

Protestant criticism persisted. A spokesman for the Waldensians—a church founded in Piedmont in 1170 by a group of dissenters from the early Roman Catholic Church—said protest ceremonies were held in various Protestant churches in Italy. Special rites were conducted in a Waldensian church near St. Peter's for adoration of Christ, to reassert the role of the Saviour in Christian religion.

The announcement August 14 that the dogma would be proclaimed set off the criticism. The Church of England deplored the move. The Archbishop of Canterbury said the Pope's action would increase "dogmatic differences in Christendom."

The Vatican has made no official reply to these criticisms. However L'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper, said Catholics have believed in the assumption for centuries.

Skins of 6 Sheep Used in Parchment

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 1 (AP).—The skins of six sheep supplied the 26 sheets of parchment for the papal bull on which is inscribed the assumption dogma.

Five months were needed to compile and prepare the document under the direction of the apostolic chancellory.

Happy Is The Day When Backache Goes Away . . . .

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

'Relapse' Deserves Broadway Hearing

By Richard L. Coe

HOW "THE RELAPSE" will fare in its American future reminds Star Cyril Ritchard of one of his restoration comedy tours with John Gielgud into the British provinces.

They were playing Liverpool, that port city on the Mersey, and reaction, which had been lively in London, was mute in Liverpool. The best people went to the opening, but laughs were unexpectedly few.

Remarked Gielgud: "The quality of Mersey is not trained."

Which leads me to wonder how the rest of "The Relapse" tour and its New York opening on the twenty-first will go, for its Washington reception has been very strong, audiences laughing at the zany characters and piling encouragingly into the Gayety. Next week Pittsburgh, where there's a newspaper strike and hence little opportunity for public education; the following one Detroit, then New York. It's always a problem to get people into what they fear is a "classic," but the Gayety audiences have proved that, once they're in, a good time's in store, rollicking and bawdy.

Frankly, I think it's a swell show, but remembering past difficulties of what are laboriously labeled "classics" (anything over 25 years old) on hit-conscious Broadway, I have me fears, split me windpipe, on just what its chances are with that rugged set of first-nighters who terrify such of our own stars as Helen Hayes, Bobby Clark and Katharine Cornell, all of whom are perfectly frank to tell you they dread New York openings.

While I thoroughly enjoyed the first act, I can see that the exposition is a bit leisurely, which is the way with almost all first acts, especially the first 10 minutes. Certainly the last two acts are grand fun and Gayety audiences are staying on for prolonged applause at the end. Matter of fact, I enjoyed my second visit even more than I did the opening.

What I'm getting at is that certainly the quality of the Potomac seems trained, but what about the quality of the Hudson, where, if the first-nighters don't lap it up, the future of an entertainment which people are so obviously enjoying might be dim.

Little Roman for "Classics"

For hit-conscious Broadway is not geared to plays of the past. Ruth Gordon's rowdy "The Country Wife" didn't last, nor did Gielgud's "Love for Love," though the record for more somber works (Strindberg, Ibsen, Chekov, even Shakespeare and Shaw) is even less propitiating. It's all part of the increasingly small number of theaters, with accompanying "stop clauses"—when the box office goes below a certain figure, the theater goes to any play knocking at the gates. It has to be a quick smash or fizzle.

However, the Washington record may prove something to both the producers and the imaginative Louis Lotito, controller of the Morosco. And whatever its New York fate, Washington's enjoyment of the play is certainly likely to be repeated in Boston and Chicago. For there are more theatergoers outside of New York than managers usually admit—as the long-lived, incoming "Lend an Ear" reminds us.

WILLIAM BENNETT, business representative of the stagehands local, has quoted a figure of $180 for his union members' services for each Saturday morning performance projected by the Children's Museum of Washington plays at the Gayety Theater. . . . This is based on the use of 144 heads of departments to mount the productions . . . Elsewhere the same group of players is permitted to use three heads of departments at $3.20 an hour, which comes to $38.40 . . . In Alexandria's Virginia Theater last winter, the stagehands' bill was $39.66 for two performances . . . Which accounts for the fact that the projected Clare Tree Major performance here November 18 has been canceled . . . The next date for Bennett's uncompromising fee to cancel is the Christmas play, penciled in for December 28.

THE DISTRICT Recreation-sponsored Children's Theater revue makes its bow this afternoon at 4 in the Roosevelt High auditorium . . . This second edition for "All Over Town" is composed of original songs, sketches and dances by teen-agers from playground units of the metropolitan area . . . There will be a performance tomorrow night at 8:30 and a Saturday matinee at 2:30.

THE GEORGE Washington University Players will host a group of veterans from Bethesda Naval preview performance of "Street Scene" tonight at Lisner Auditorium. . . . William Vorenberg, the industrious "Faith of Our Fathers" chieftain has directed a cast headed by Joe Elman and Lynn Clark. . . . The play will be repeated tomorrow and Saturday nights at Lisner. . . . Reservations at National 5055.

Postlude

National Symphony Reaches Peak in Rachmaninoff Work

By Paul Hume

The second symphony of Rachmanioff was played last night by the National Symphony Orchestra.

After the concert, members of the orchestra said they had never enjoyed the work as much as under Mitchell's inspired direction—direction that did not flag from beginning to end of the program.

It was a performance to stand with any version of this sweeping Russian tone poem. Watching a score during the music, one could see with what fidelity Howard Mitchell followed the brooding composer's intentions. The tenderness called for in the singing passages was of intensely moving beauty.

And in the great surges of sound, the orchestra spoke with its most beautful voice. The National Symphony Orchestra this year suits me as well as any orchestra I have ever heard, and better than all but one or two.

The orchestra has a kind of refinement and splendor in its playing that has not been present to any such extent in past years. The sound of the brass choir last night was stunning, whether loud or soft. The horns in the big sections of the symphony were giving the kind of thrills they were supposed to.

As for the clarinet solos in the slow movement, Robert Marcellus is turning into one of the greatest exponents of his instrument we have heard. His tone and phrasing, under the conductor's sensitive leadership, was expressive in the highest.

The strings shone throughout the symphony, as they had earlier in a suite from Purcel's Abdelazar.

But the crowning moments of the evening were those contained in the symphony, in which Mitchell reached the same great heights as in last week's Respighi. Our orchestra has become what we have long expected.

Earl Wild was the soloist playing the world premiere, in concert, of Paul Creston's piano concerto.

The music is perfectly put together, but it says almost nothing. It has all the allure of the Warsaw Concerto, and the rich orchestration of the concertos of Rachmaninoff. Wild handled its tricks and tough lines with perfect technique and assurance. But it is not worth the time and effort put into it.

We hope to hear more Creston of the caliber of his second symphony. The new concerto is too far from his best.

Next week: John Martin, cellist, in Schelomo, with music by Haydn, Wagner, and Hindemith.

U. N. Group Warned On Palestine Refugees

LAKE SUCCESS, Nov. 1 (NYHT) — Failure to settle the Palestine refugee problem is generating "explosive forces . . . which should be dealt with before the point of detonation is reached," Howard Kennedy, director of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency, warned here today.

Kennedy told the special political committee of the General Assembly that some 800,00 refugees "are entering their third winter in exile weary and disillusioned." His statement was presented as the committee opened debate on aid to Arab refugees and their repatriation.

New Polio Case Reported

The District's 169th poliomyelitis case of the year was reported yesterday—a 23-year-old woman of the 1800 block of Lamont st. nw., who was admitted to Gallinger Hospital on October 31. At this time last year 99 cases had been reported.

Truman Sends ECA Director To Philippines

President Truman announced yesterday that he is sending William C. Foster, Economic Coopration administrator, to Manila to start discussions on the 250 million dollars five-year program of economic aid the United States has offered the Philippines government if it agrees to undertake certain reforms.

Mr. Truman said he was acting on an invitation from President Quirino of the Philippines, who indicated a willinginess to discuss the findings of the so-called Bell report, which includes the aid proposal.

The report, published Saturday, was prepared by Daniel W. Bell, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, and President of the American Security & Trust Co., after a two-month, on-the-spot survey of Philippine conditions. The report blamed poor administration and widespread corruption for the islands' financial and economic distress and called for drastic reforms as a condition of United States aid.

Mr. Foster will leave Saturday, accompanied by three ECA assistants: R. Allen Griffin, director of the ECA's Far East program divisions; Vincent Checchi, an ECA special assistant who participated in the Bell survey, and Robert A. Mullen, ECA director of information.

After talks with President Quirino, the group will make a quick tour of Far Eastern countries included in the 41 million dollars ECA aid program. These countries are Indo-China, Indonesia, Burma, Formosa and Korea.

Inflation Curb

BELLINGHAM, Wash., Nov. 1 (AP).—City employes today hoped they had stopped one inflationary trend. A coin-wrapping machine was being repaired. It was putting 55 pennies into a 50-cent roll.

Vinson Opens Drive to Build Carrier for A-Bomb Planes

By The Associated Press

A new drive started at the Capitol yesterday for construction of a super aircraft carrier explicitly designed to mother planes capable of delivering the atomic bomb.

Rep. Vinson (D., Ga.) said he will introduce a bill in the short session of Congress starting this month to authorize the building of such a vessel, long a fond dream of the Navy.

What he has in mind is a 60,000-ton craft, either of flush deck design or else with small superstructure that would present a minimum of interference for landing and takeoff operations of good-sized bombers. The Navy's biggest carriers now are 45,000-tonners. Even from them fliers have contrived to launch A-bomb size aircraft; recently such a plane negotiated a landing on a 45,000-ton carrier.

Announcing his plans for the new legislation, which he implied had Administration approval, Vinson told reporters:

"It would be a mistake to limit the ability for delivering the atomic bomb only to land bases."

The Navy once started construction of a huge flush-deck carrier, to be called the U. S. S. United States, but soon after the keel was laid on April, 1949, the work was halted by order of Louis Johnson, then Secretary of Defense. That vessel would have run about 80,000 tons.

Wildcat Strike Idles 11,000 Steel Employes

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 1 (AP).—Steel production at the Bethlehem Steel Company's Lackawanna plant was halted today as a "wildcat" walkout idled 11,000 employes in protest against dismissal of a member of the union grievance committee.

Barrett Praises Washingtonians For Sane Holiday

Maj. Robert Barrett, superintendent of police, praised Washingtonians yesterday for what he said seemed to be the "most safe and sane" Halloween his department has ever known.

The number of false alarms was cut down to 26 Tuesday night, he said. Last year it was 42.

For his praise Barrett singled out police, the press and radio, P-TAs, citizen groups and the District Recreation Department.

50 Preaching Mission Events Draw 11,000 In Area

For the fourth straight day, thousands of Washington area Protestants continued their Festival of Faith.

An estimated 11,000 persons attended more than 50 events of the six-day preaching mission yesterday, according to Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the sponsoring Washington Federation of Churches.

Total estimated attendance to date is 45,000, Dr. Reissig said.

Not Enough to Attend

A member of the staff of the American Committee for the World Council of Churches, Dr. Applegarth said, "the weakness of the American church life has been the quality of its members who think it is enough to come regularly with no intention of being part of the family."

In another talk, several hundred Pentagon personnel were warned that "no man can deal adequately with the security of a nation and have a low opinion of himself."

The Rev. Ralph W. Loew of Buffalo, added, "No man can safely handle great power without coming to grips with his own relationship to the world in which he lives."

At Eldbrooke Methodist Church, the Rev. James A. Jones of Charlotte, N. C., said, "Deficiencies in diet produce handicaps for the body. Improper habits of spiritual nourishment just as really hamper the soul."

Escapists Criticized

The Rev. Elmer G. Homrighausen struck out at "escapists" in a talk last night at Calvary Baptist Church.

The professor of Christian education at Princeton Theological Seminary said, "Some pople are trying desperately to escape tensions of the times through alcohol, sex, travel and a hundred other ways.

"The real peace of mind," he said, "comes not to those who run away from life, not to those who violently abuse life, but to those who accept it, and live it out in faith, in hope and in love with Christ."

The Rev. Reuben H. Mueller of Dayton, Ohio, told members of the First Methodist Church, Hyattsville, that "some people have just enough religion to be vaccinated against the real thing."

"Faith Dispels Fear"

An audience at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church last night heard the Rev. George D. Kelsey of New York term the Christian faith "a fear-dispelling agency."

Three hundred and nine churches with an adult membership of 125,000 are cooperating with the mission, which continues through Friday.

Humphrey, Arlington Officials Criticize District Milk Ban

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Ban on the sale of "outside" milk inside Washington was criticized yesterday by Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.) and two members of the Arlington County Board. The ban went into effect at 12:01 a. m.

Meanwhile, District health officials decided they lacked legal authority to force independent dairies to place different labels on the "outside" milk.

Senator Humphrey, in a telegram to the District Commissioners and the Senate District Committee, charged the regulation was "designed primarily toward maintaining" trade barriers against milk produced in other areas.

"Should Await 'Hill' Probe"

Minnesota milk "is every bit as nutritious and vitamin-rich as milk produced by Maryland and Virginia farmers," Humphrey declared. He said D. C. regulations created "a ring around the District"-anad prevented "outside competition."

He asked that the milk market be kept open until Congress could investigate.

In Arlington, County Board Chairman Dan Dugan was even more critical. He called the order a "racket that prevents retailers from selling milk at reasonable prices."

"Washington's independent dairies are being choked by the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association monopoly. Milk that passes United States Public Health Service tests is good enough for human consumption anywhere.

Called a Monopoly Trick

"The D. C. test is trick test designed to maintain the milk monopoly. It's no better than the USPHS test," Dugan declared.

Another board member, Robert W. Cox, said he joined in with "most of what Dugan has said" and announced he had asked County Manager A. T. Lundberg to report by Saturday on Arlington's ban on "outside" milk.

Lundberg met yesterday with C. F. Hanger, assistant director, Drug and Food Division, Virginia State Department of Agriculture, and Dr. R. G. Beachley, county health officer, on the ban. He said it will stand until the State officials act, since it is "actually a State-wide matter."

Hanger is scheduled to meet with District health officials today.

Meanwhile, Washington inspectors moved in on Embassy, Highland and Wakefield-Model Farms dairies to check the separation of D. C.-inspected milk from "outside" milk.

Under the Commissioners' orders only D. C.-inspected milk may be sold in the city, but the plants may process other milk for sale in nearby Maryland and Virginia or to the armed services.

Wakefield was exempted from the ban by virtue of a restraining order granted late Tuesday by District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff. A hearing on a permanent injunction will be held November 8 at 10 a. m.

Inspectors were placed as Wakefield anyway to take samples of the milk—D. C. inspected and "outside."

The Washington Board of Trade's Public Health Committee heard attorneys for the independent dairis and the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association at a luncheon meeting, but decided to take no action in the controversy.

Police to Quiz 2 in Slaying of West Virginian

Two men arrested by a Fairfax County policeman last Friday on vagrancy charges were tabbed yesterday as suspects in the murder of a retired West Virginia coal miner.

Edward E. McClanahan, 19 of Bradshaw, W. Va., and Charles C. Payne, 18, Jola, W. Va., were arrested on Route 211 near Centreyville by Pvt. Herbert Marcey because, he said, they "looked suspicious." After booking the pair on vagrancy charges, police learned the car they occupied was owned by Hobart D. Murphy, 51 of Caretta, W. Va., who had been reported missing by his family.

Yesterday West Virginia police found Murphy's decomposed body on a ridge near Welch, W. Va., and said he apparently had been murdered. A West Virginia State trooper last night was en route to Fairfax to question the pair in connection with Murphy's death.

Travel Agents Elect Simmons; To Hear Gen. Hershey Today

A. L. Simmons of New York has been elected president of the American Society of Travel Agents, which opened its twentieth annual convention yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel.

Other officers elected are Dorothy Marsh of New York, first vice president; T. H. Lachelt of Oakland, Calif., second vice president; Else R. Petersen of New York, secretary, and A. Edgar Parent of Woonsocket, treasurer.

The sessions yesterday drew some 1000 active and allied members. The convention will close Friday.

The society was tendered a luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham by the Washington Hotel Association and the Greater National Capital Committee.

A luncheon at 1 p. m. today will hear Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service System, talk on "Manpower Problems."

Sessions will start at 9:15 a. m. today. The topic will be, "What's Ahead in 1951?"

John R. Steelman, special Presidential assistant, will speak on "The Meaning of Korea" at a dinner at 8 p. m. Friday at the Shoreham.

Arlington Judge Cites Need for Testing Drunks

Arlington Trial Justice Hugh Reid yesterday labeled the county government "penny-pinching" and "penurious" for not making funds available for scientific testing of suspected drunks.

He delivered this view from the bench during the County Court hearing of Edward D. Lemmer, 31, of 1206 N. Rolft st., Arlington, on a charge of driving while drunk.

Despite testimony of police and witnesses that Lemmer was "unsteady" on his feet and had alcohol on his breath after an accident, October 14, at Lee blvd. and Arlington Ridge rd., Judge Reid declared: "I don't know whether he was drunk or not."

Judge Reid found Lemmer guilty of reckless driving, fined him $50 and costs and ordered his driving permit suspended for six months.

Art Sale to Benefit Arlington Church

An art exhibition and sale to benefit the building fund of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, N. 26th and Glebe rd., Arlington, will open Sunday and run through November 12.

This week will begin Sunday with opening ceremonies and awards at 7 p. m. During the following week, the exhibit will be open from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. with evening huors on Monday from 8 to 10 p. m. On November 12, the final day, the hours will be from 2 to 5 p. m.

Prices on the paintings will range from $2.50 to $125.

Fairfax Supervisors Suggest Changes

Fairfax County's Board of Supervisors yesterday went on record as favoring a tailor-made charter form of government for the county in the event of defeat next Tuesday of a proposed government reorganization.

By a 5-1 vote, the board agreed to appoint a citizens' government commission to draft a new government plan if a majority of voters oppose proposals to change over to either a county manager or county executive form of government.

Recommendations of the commission, "geared to meet the conditions and needs of this county alone," would have to be submitted to the General Assembly for legislative approval, it was ointed out. The assembly convenes in January, 1952.

The supervisors indorsed the county executive form as "far superior" to the county manager plan if an immediate change is dictated by the electorate.

Baruch Aids In Hospital Dedication

Bernard M. Baruch, adviser to Presidents, today will take part in the dedication of medical equipment at the George Washington University Hospital to the memory of two of his friends, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson and Maj. Gen. Edwin M. Watson.

The ceremony, to be held at 10 a. m. at the department of physical medicine and rehabilitation of the hospital, 23d st. and Washington cir. nw., will include the unveiling of a plaque.

Admiral Grayson was chairman of the American National Red Cross and physician to three Presidents. Gen. Watson was military aide to President Roosevelt.

The equipment which the plaque will dedicate was purchased with a $30,000 donation by Baruch when the building opened in 1948.

Mrs. George Harrison, widow of Admiral Grayson, his son, Gordon Grayson, and Mrs. Watson, widow of General Watson, are expected to attend. Among the other invited guests are Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, physician to President Roosevelt and now Red Cross chairman of blood program medical policies and procedures, Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post, and Mrs. Meyer.

The university will be represented by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president; Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant 3d, vice president; Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, dean of the school of medicine and hospital medical director, and Dr. Charles S. Wise, chief of the department of physical medicine and rehabilitation.

School Report Vote Delayed In Arlington

The Arlington Ridge Civic Association last night decided to defer action on a committee report which criticized the county's school building costs as "excessively high."

The group refused to take action after members said the report could influence a decision on the proposed $7,450,000 school bond issue upon which residents will vote next Tuesday.

The resolution passed at last night's meeting said the association's special committee had made the study "to contribute constructively to more effective use of Arlington's limited school building funds, and not in any way to influence public consideration of the school bond issue."

Crestwood

The Crestwood Citizens Association voted last night not to contribute any funds toward defrayment of expenses in the current court fight against an increase in gas rates. No reason was given for the action.

A special committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations has received contributions from several member associations to aid in its fight against a gas rate boost proposed by the Washington Gas Light Co.

The Crestwood group also accepted the report of a committee headed by C. V. Maudlin to enlarge the jurisdiction of the association through a constitutional amendment. An area of about two blocks is involved.

Washington Highlands

The Washington Highlands Citizens Association last night voted to have its education committee study the Hager report recommending a merger of Washington teachers colleges and make recommendations for action by the group.

Two Charged In Assaults On Policemen

The son of a former Arlington Police Court judge and a former convict were charged in separate cases yesterday with assaulting police officers.

Benjamin S. Hedrick, 23, son of former Judge Benjamin H. Hedrick, is charged with assaulting Pvts. H. R. Kershner and C. F. Tucker at 7th st. and Virginia ave. sw., Tuesday night.

His case was continued in Municipal Court until December 5, after the Government said "further investigation" was required.

The officers stopped Hedrick in a car for tying up traffic and were assaulted, police said. Kershner was treated at Providence Hospital for facial cuts. Hedrick was not in court yesterday. Assistant U. S. Attorney Harold Titus said he was "not in physical condition to appear," but was confined to bed at his home, 5602 S. 1st st., Arlington, under $1200 bond.

Fomer convict John Catir, 28, was held under $1000 bond for action of the grand jury, charged with assaulting vice squad Officers Louis A. Fochett and Alphonso Cirotola late Tuesday in the Dupont Circle underpass.

Catir's wife complained to the vice squad that her husband was going to force her to commit immoral acts with a cab driver, Cirotola testified at a hearing. The two officers followed the Catirs by arrangement, and tried to arrest Catir when he started struggling with his wife, he said. Catir punched Fochett on the mouth, Cirotola testified, and "swung three times at me."

Annexation Case Under Advisement

A three-judge court began deliberating the merits of Alexandria's annexation case against Fairfax County late yesterday after listening to a full day of final argument by attorneys for both sides.

The tribunal, sitting in Fairfax Circuit Court, indicated through Judge Paul E. Brown of Fairfax, it "may" come up with a decision in the case this afternoon. Sitting with Judge Brown are Judges Walter T. McCarthy of Arlington, and Jeff Walter of Accomac.

The 7½-square-mile area Alexandria seeks to acquire lies mostly to the west and partly to the south of the present city. It is part of the county's Sanitary District No. 1, for which a three-million-dollar bond issue for sewerage improvements was voted last year by residents of the district.

The disputed territory's status as a part of the sanitary district was a focal point of final arguments yesterday. Attorneys for the county contended the district should not be dismembered, inasmuch as the whole area is pledged to repay the bonds floated for the sewerage program.

Alexandria attorneys argued there is no precedent in Virginia's annexation law for prohibiting a city from annexing adjacent land simply because it is part of a sanitary district. Award of the land to the city, they contended, would not interfere with operation of the remainder of the sanitary district.

Connally, Evant Hit Woodley Rezoning

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

Residents of Massachusetts Avenue Park and nearby areas staged a verbal battle with real estate operators before the District Zoning Commission yesterday in an effort to keep apartments off the Woodley estate's backyard.

Opponents of the request to rezone 11 acres included Paul M. Herzog, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, and Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d, president of the National Council for Historic Sites and Buildings.

Also opposed were Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) and Assistant Secretary of the Navy John T. Koehler, who sent aides to represent them. A letter favoring the rezoning was received earlier from Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.). Each lives in the immediate vicinity of Woodley.

Wooded Part of Estate

The land involved is the rear, wooded portion of the estate, which once served as the "Summer White House" and, more recently the home of the late Henry L. Stimson. Owners are Washington businessmen Thornton W. Owen, Edward C. Baltz and Ned Bord.

They have asked for rezoning of 11 of their 17 acres, leaving a 140-foot strip along Cleveland ave. to the south, a 110-foot strip along 31st st. to the west, and two acres at the northeast near the Swiss Legation. The owners have presented no specific plans, but say they intend to build elevator apartments likened, by one of their witnesses, to the Westchester Apartments.

About 20 opponents protested that they had built in the neighborhood to get away from apartments; that rezoning would push down their property values and that more traffic and parking problems would follow.

Regarded as Breach of Faith

Herzog suggested that rezoning might cause many residents to move away. Connally sent word that he thought rezoning would be a breach of faith. Grant said approval would hurt chances of preserving Woodley.

Earl S. Draper, city planner and former deputy administrator of the Federal Housing Administration, opposed the request as spot zoning and as "disturbance of residential enjoyment."

Washington Builders Edward R. Carr and Lewis T. Breuninger testified for the owners that luxury apartment contruction is the best use to which the land could be put. Small houses could be built under present zoning, they said, but this would mean cutting down all trees to level the ground and would not be suitable in the expensive neighborhod. It is not spot zoning, they said, but a logical "continuation" of the apartment zone on the east side of 29th st.

Ought to Have Known It.

James C. Wilkes, attorney for the owners, pointed out that apartments should be near the center of town, not in the suburbs. Persons who bought on the edge of the area where the Wardman Park and Shoreham Hotels are located should have known Woodley would eventually be put to its best use, he added.

The commission took the case under advisement and recessed until 2 p. m. to hear other cases.

Brown Called Sane at Time Of Slaying

Psychiatrist Joseph L. Gilbert testified yesterday that first-degree murder defendant Charlie H. (Three Finger) Brown, 55, was sane when Raymond E. (Big Red) Lewis was beaten to death with a baseball bat.

Dr. Gilbert, called by the prosecution to rebut the defense claim that Brown, a 9th st floater, was acting under an insane impulse when he killed Lewis, a flophouse manager, was on the witness stand throughout the day.

The questioning turned on one point as to what constituted abnormal behavior.

District Court Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut suggested that if a man should dance on the edge of a rooftop, such behavior would be abnormal, but Dr. Gilbert replied that it depended on the motive.

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence testified that at the arraignment a few hours after the arrest, Brown appeared to be sane and not drunk. The defense contends that Brown was overpowered by alcohol when the killing occurred.

Bastian to Be Sworn In As Judge November 8

Walter M. Bastian will be sworn in November 8 as judge of District Court. The oath will be given by Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson of the United States.

Bastian replaces Judge Jennings Bailey who recently announced his retirement. Yesterday, his fellow judges honored Bailey at a party given by Judge and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts.

Judge Bailey will continue serving on the bench at least part time.

Blue Plate Special:

NET RETURNS—Bobby Riggs' income tax problems, if any, apparently are being nicely solved by his two late-season promotional ventures. After taking a $36,000 bath along with John Jachym on the ill-fated tour of the major league all-star barnstormers, Riggs' tennis troupe isn't drawing, either.

Riggs' first shocker was when Gussie Moran and the rest of his cast drew only 6526 in Madison Square Garden. He brought them down to Washington where tennis used to attract 5000 fans for a pro show, and reaped only 2650 paid admissions for two nights.

Povich

The suspicion is that the glamour-buildup of Gussie alienated the tennis fans, and that Riggs would have been smarter to try to sell the good tennis that Pauline Betz Addie, Pancho Segura and Jack Kramer can play. In fact, from now on, his publicists will try to de-emphasize Gussie's under-things and make it a straight tennis-act.

Marshall Plan money could yet bail Riggs out. In March he's taking the troupe abroad where the folks perhaps have a finer appreciation of Gussie's unmentionable. After all, it was in England that she made her reputation.

CAPITAL CLASSIC—Griffith Stadium's biggest football crowd of the year—30,000—will be pulled by a couple of college teams, not the Redskins. It's the game they call the Capital Classic, being fought out this year by the colored colleges, Tennessee State and North Carolina A. and T. under the lights tomorrow night.

The Classic is taking on tradition, too. Tomorrow's contest will be the ninth annual game. The game will have a heavy bearing on the Negro intercollegiate title, with the rugged Carolina Aggies the favorite. In their conference, the Aggies have won four, tied one, but more significantly, haven't allowed their opponents a point.

They average 211 pounds per man, and are coached by Bill Bell, former All-America tackle from Ohio State. The Aggies used to be a Washington favorite a generation ago when they moved into Griffith Stadium to play Howard U. Their game here in 1924, will be remembered for a tragic note. Howard End Speed Johnson tackled Fullback Lane on one end sweep, suffered a broken neck and never regained consciousness.

BYRD STADIUM—When Maryland and George Washington U. collide on Saturday in Maryland's new stadium named for the university president, Dr. H. C. Byrd may be gnawed by a couple of conflicting loyalties.

Back in 1907, the Associated Press recalls, Dr. Byrd quarterbacked Maryland to an 11-0 victory over George Washington.

In 1908, he quarterbacked George Washington to a 57-0 victory over Maryland.

Byrd didn't play in the 1909 Maryland-GW game. He was starring for Georgetown U. that year.

College football has come a long way since the tramp-athlete days of Byrd, but if those days could produce a college president of the stature of Dr. Byrd, then there is much to be said in their favor, apparently.

Maryland's ascendancy in college football is traced in large measure to Byrd, a football-minded president. When an Annapolis alumni was recently deploring the sad state of the game at his school, he added "What we need is a football-minded Secretary of the Navy, and my candidate is Dr. H. C. Byrd."

DRAFT—The major leagues are on the verge now of conceding a higher classification to the Pacific Coast League which for a half dozen years now has been clamoring for major status. That, the Coast League won't get, but may settle for a 4-A label that would raise it above the 3-A International and American Association leagues.

The Coast League's chief squawk has been that it loses too many of its graduates to the majors for the $10,000 draft price. There is talk that the new figure will be $25,000, and thus a deterrent to wholesale draft raids.

Unlike the other two high minor leagues, all but one of the Coast League teams are independently owned and uncontrolled by the major league owners. They make their money on attendance and the development of ballplayers for sale. The new draft price will permit them to keep their good players longer and thus command bigger prices when they are put on the market. But they won't be completely happy until they get status as a third major league.

It's a Contest Selection

Maybe Middies Will Turn Table on Irish

NAVY VS. NOTRE DAME at Cleveland Saturday.

The Middies haven't beaten the Irish since 1944. With Notre Dame already beaten three times this might be Navy's chance to turn the trick.

The Middies won their only game of the year, 20-14, from Southern California two weeks ago, but slipped last Saturday, losing, 30-7, to Penn. Notre Dame has lost two in a row, 20-7, to Indiana, and, 36-33, to Michigan State.

This is one of the games in The Washington Post's football contest this week. The contest winner will receive two tickets to the Maryland-North Carolina game in Chapel Hill, N. C., on November 11 as well as round-trip, first-class transportation for two persons.

Contest Rules

THE CONTEST each week will include 20 major college games. The contestant will select the winner (or tie) in each of these games. There will also be a twenty-first game for which the contestant must give the "Probable Score," to be considered by the contest judges only in case two or more persons tie on the first 20 games.

All entries must be in the hands of the Football Contest Editor not later than 9 p.m. Friday of each week. Entries should be left at the Service Counter in the lobby of The Washington Post Bldg., 1337 E St. N. W.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week shall be declared the winner. In case of ties, all persons sharing in the tie will receive duplicate awards.

The decisions of the judges will be final.

Entries submitted must be legible, with the selections listed in the order they are announced in The Washington Post.

Entries may be handwritten or typewritten. However, carbon copies and mimeographed copies or copies made by any other duplicating machine will NOT be accepted. You may submit as many entries as you wish.

No employe of The Washington Post or member of his immediate family is eligible to participate in this contest.

Scarbath's Injury Will Bench Him Against GW

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

X-rays yesterday revealed the 19-year-old passing-running star received a shoulder separation in Tuesday's bruising scrimmage. Scarbath, who watched practice with his right hand in a sling yesterday, will also probably miss the North Carolina game a week from Saturday, Trainer Duke Wyre reported.

With Scarbath, the hearth of the Terrapins' tricky split-T offense, on the sidelines the job of directing the Maryland attack falls into the inexperienced hands of another sophomore, 19-year-old Bob DeStefano, of Providence, R. I.

DeStefano Lacks Experience

DeStefano has played in only one game this season—the second half against Georgia on September 23. Otherwise, the blond-headed Scarbath has been at the controls for virtually every second.

The injury to Scarbath hurts the Marylanders where it hurts the most. The Baltimore 190-pounder had begun to blossom out as a real star although only a sophomore.

He was the chief figure in Maryland's victories over Navy and Michigan State.

He was injured on the next to the last play of Tuesday's long scrimmage. It was one of the few times Coach Jim Tatum had scrimmaged his squad on Tuesdays. He normally reserves the rough work for Wednesdays.

The statistics of Maryland's first six games reveal Scarbath's real value to the Terps. He carried the ball 75 times, more than any other back, and averaged 3.1 yard per carry executing his deceptive keeper play. The team's chief passer, the Baltimore blond connected on 30 of his 72 passing attempts, tossing three for touchdowns. He also scored three touchdowns.

Scarbath and DeStefano were running neck and neck for the varsity signal-calling berth in preseason drills, but Scarbath won the job hands down with a great performance against Georgia, although the Terps lost, 27-7.

Went Good Against Spartans

He has twice been named the Southern Conference's sophomore of the week. Coach Biggie Munn, of Michigan State, said Scarbath's great ball-handling and passing was chiefly responsible for Maryland's 34-7 victory over the Spartons, then ranked the Nation's No. 2 team.

The inexperienced DeStefano will be meeting no strangers in George Washington. He quarterbacked the Terps' reserves in a pre-season scrimmage against the Colonials and also played against the GW freshmen last year.

DeStefano weighs 180 pounds and is 5 feet, 9 inches. He is considered a better long passer than Scarbath, but not in the class with the injured star when it comes to directing the team and executing the smart fakes the Split-T offense is so dependent upon for its quarterback.

Statistically

GW Better Than Duke

Maryland, 26-14 conqueror of Duke last week, steps up in class when it plays George Washington Saturday at College Park, national collegiate statistics would have you believe.

This week's figures rate Duke the eighth best passing team, with G. W. fifth. Billy Cox, the Blue Devils' tailback, moved up a notch to take over as the Nation's leading passer with 1047 yards.

Andy Davis, G. W.'s kingpin, is eighth in total offense with 1051 yards, and he's eleventh in passing with 887 yards.

Here's a roundup on how the Southern Conference area schools rate in national statistics.

DUKE—Billy Cox, second in total offense, first in passing. Ceep Youmans, third in pass receptions with 31 for 329 yards. Tom Powers, tenth in receptions with 23 for 388 yards. Team is eighth in passing with 188 yards average, sixth in pass defense with opponents' averaging 61.7 yards.

G. W.—Andy Davis, eighth in total offense, eleventh in passing. Team is fifth in passing with 200.5 yards average.

CLEMSON—Jackie Calvert, fifteenth in total offense with 857 yards, fourteenth in rushing with 527 yards. Team is tenth in total offense with 392 yards average, eighth in rushing with 284.6 average.

WAKE FOREST—Third in total defense with opponents' averaging 170.7 yards per game, second in rushing defense with 71.7 yards average.

N. C. STATE—Ed Mooney, fourteenth in total offense with 870 yards.

VIRGINIA MILITARY INSTITUTE—Jim Coley, seventeenth in total offense with 835 yards. Joe Stump, tenth in rushing with 570 yards.

SOUTH CAROLINA—Steve Wadiak, fourth in rushing with 706 yards.

WEST VIRGINIA—Fred Bishoff, fifteenth in pass receptions with 22 for 390 yards. Team is eleventh in passing with 178 yards average.

WILLIAM AND MARY—Joe Connors, thirteenth in punting with 40.2 yards average.

WASHINGTON AND LEE—Tenth in rushing with 275.5 yards average.

Appling Will Pilot Memphis, Chisox Farm

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 1 (AP).—The dean of American League shortstops, Luke Appling, dropped off the Chicago White Sox roster today to sign up as manager of the Memphis Chicks.

Thus Appling, at 41, ended a 20-year record-breaking career as a big league player to move into the brain trust section of the Class AA Southern Association.

He said: "I can't think of a better place to start managing than in Memphis." Memphis is one of the Sox's farm clubs.

Chuck Comiskey, young part owner of the Sox, offered the job to "Old Aches and Pains" 10 days ago. Appling telephoned his acceptance from his Atlanta home today.

The move put one of the brighter major league stars—and one of the most durable—at the Chick helm. Appling set a major league record by playing 2218 games at short and twice led the loop in hitting.

Lucius Benjamin Appling, jr.—that's his full name—was born at High Point, N. C., April 2, 1909. He started playing baseball with the Atlanta Crackers in 1930.

He hit .326 with the Atlanta Crackers that year and was sold to the White Sox, where he held down shortstop until last season, when young Chico Carrasquel took over and Appling's activity was confined to 50 games.

Luke's record in the American includes a league-leading .388 in 1936 and .342 in 1942. His lifetime batting average was .310. He succeeds Al Todd, who resigned after bossing the Chicks two years.

Mikan Gets 34 But Bullets Win

BALTIMORE, Nov. 1 (AP).—The Baltimore Bullets scored first and stayed in front all the way tonight to turn in an 81-71 victory over the Minneapolis Lakers in their National Basketball Association season debut.

Paul Hoffman led the victors with 15 points, George Mikan the losers with 34.

Navy, Cal

Jankowski Picks Two Underdogs

Catholic University Coach John Jankowski picks a couple of underdogs in this week's Washington Post Pick the Winner Football Contest. He likes Navy over Notre Dame and California over Washington.

Jan hopes to top the records of Georgetown's Bob Margarita and Virginia's Art Guepe who scored 13 out of 20. G. W.'s Bo Rowland predicted 12 and Maryland's Jim Tatum 11 in previous contests. Here are his picks:

MARYLAND over G.W. (too much manpower), ARMY over Penn (the Cadets a great club), HOLY CROSS over Harvard (I hail from Worcester, Mass., and stick with my home-town team), DUKE over Georgia Tech (Wallace Wade's boys will rebound after Terps loss); TENNESSEE over North Carolina (Heard a lot about Bob Neyland's powerhouse); PITT over West Virginia (Saw the Mountaineers against G. W. and wasn't impressed); GEORGIA over Alabama (Wally Butts is a terrific coach); KENTUCKY over Florida (A rout for Bear Bryant); LSU over Mississippi (a close one); MICHIGAN STATE over Indiana (Spartans scored 36 points on Notre Dame); OHIO STATE over Northwestern (I like team that piles up big score); PURDUE over Wisconsin (upset hunch); NEBRASKA over Missouri (another hunch); TULSA over Oklahoma Aggies (Hurricanes getting stronger); TEXAS CHRISTIAN over Baylor (Just guessing); CALIFORNIA over Washington (Cal is just getting up steam); STANFORD over Southern Cal; (Trojans don't have it); YALE over Dartmouth (Elis have great underrated club); NAVY over Notre Dame (Irish no longer invincible, this is Middies' chance for revenge); S. M. U. over Texas (14-13).

Saddler Whips Charley Riley

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 1 (AP).—Featherweight Boxing Champion Sandy Saddler took a decision over Charley Riley tonight in a vicious 10-round nontitle bout that saw both fighters bloodied by the torrent of blows.

District Sprint Champ

Fielding, Hoya Track Star, Dies of Kidney Ailment at 21

Georgetown University's James Donald (Jim) Fielding, one of the Nation's most promising sprinters, died last night at Georgetown Hospital of chronic nephritis, an inflammation of the kidneys. He was 21.

James Fielding

A native of Metuchen, N. J., Fielding was this year's District of Columbia AAU 100 and 200 yard dash champion.

He gained national attention last winter by winning the Evening Star Games' 60-yard dash championship, the Boston Knights of Columbus 50-yard title, and he was second in the Philadelphia Inquirer's 50.

He beat out some of the Nation's name sprinters in those meets, including Ira Kaplan of New York U., Marcellus Boston of Iowa, Bill Mathis of Illinois, Andy Stanfield of Seton Hall and Bill Dwyer of Rhode Island State.

Fielding's only track coach was Frank Sevigne. Jim ran for Sevigne at Seton Hall (N. J.) Prep, where he won the national scholastic 60, 100 and 220 yard titles three years ago. His time for the 100 was 9.6 seconds. When Sevige was promoted to coach at Georgetown, Jim followed him.

Last spring Jim set Georgetown's track record at 9.7 seconds. Sevigne termed him "the most outstanding collegiate sprint prospect in the Nation."

Fielding was a sophomore, majoring in business administration. His mother, Mrs. Mary Fielding of Metuchen, and his sister, Mrs. Charlotte Ridmead of North Plainfield, N. J., were at his bedside when he died. His father, Francis Fielding, was en route here last night.

His body will be sent to Metuchen this morning. Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

Coast League May Become Super Minor

CINCINNATI, Nov. 1 (AP).—The Pacific Coast League appears to be creeping up on the major loop status it has sought for years.

There's a good possibility the Triple-A circuit will be classed 4-A, highest ever reached by a minor league, before the 1951 campaign rolls around.

Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler, following a hearing on the Coast League's plea to be excused from all angles of baseball's annual draft, said today:

"We've decided to give relief to the Coast League as the facts justify. Such relief may result in higher classification, possibly 4-A, under the National Association structure."

Chandler said the Coast League had peculiar problems in that seven of its eight clubs are independently owned, it has a longer playing season, and it outdraws the other Triple-A leagues at the gate.

Chandler declined to go into what relief from the draft would be given the Coast League, should its status be elevated.

Via the grapevine it was learned one spokesman favored a $25,000 draft price for Coast League players, in place of the current $10,000. Another proposal was that the Coast draft be put on a voluntary basis, with a player being able to excuse himself from the draft when he signs his contract.

Friday at Stadium

Capital Classic Has Area Boys

North Carolina A & T, winner of five of six games and unscored on in CIAA competition, makes its first local appearance in 26 years when the Aggies meet Tennessee State College in the ninth annual Capital Classic at Griffith Stadium Friday night.

The Aggies, coached by Bill Bell, former All-American tackle at Ohio State and ex-Howard University coach, last played in Washington in 1924, when they battled an unbeaten Howard team to a scoreless tie.

North Carolina has defeated Wilberforce, Union, Allen, Hampton and Shaw, losing only to Florida A & M.

Tennessee, sixth ranking team in the country, moved into the spotlight Friday night by defeating the Aggies' state rival, hitherto undefeated North Carolina State, 27-20.

A good bit of North Carolina's success is attributed to the brilliance of their Sophomore Quarterback, William "Red Fox" Jackson, a graduate of Parker-Gray High School in Alexandria.

Three other Washington area boys will be in the Carolina lineup. They are Charlie Riee, center, from Parker-Gray, Cooper T. Davis, guard from Cardozo, and Leroy Tyler, end, also from Cardozo.

Quantico Seeks 6th in Row Tonight

The game will be broadcast in Washington over Station WASH-FM at 9 o'clock.

Only 1625 On Hand as Sawyer's 17 Lead Attack

By Bill Ahlberg
Post Reporter

The Washington Caps treated Alex Groza and the famed Indianapolis Olympians rather shabbily last night at Uline Arena.

Showing utter disregard for the reputation of the former Kentucky U. All-Americas, the Caps handed the Olympians a 100-84 licking in their National Basketball Association home opener before 1625 highly pleased fans.

Sawyer Hot in Third Period

The Caps were red-hot from the opening tapoff. Allan Sawyer, young Cap rookie embarked on a terrific night by grabbing the ball right after the whistle and sinking a long one-hander to get the Caps away in front where they stayed—usually by 12 or more points—for the rest of the game.

Sawyer wound up high man for the Caps with 17 points, 11 of them coming in the opening minutes of a torrid third period, when he almost single-handly matched the entire Indianapolis output.

Indianapolis, last year's Western Division champ in the NBA, came in first in one department—it had the high scorer for the evening.

The aforementioned Mr. Groza took care of that department with 23 points—10 of them on free throws.

Beard Scores 20

They got little help from the other Kentucky stars—Joe Holland and Wah Wah Jones—and the rest of the Olympians and what little they did get came only in spurts.

It was one of these spurts as the third period opened, that carried the Olympians to their best display and cut the Caps lead to 5 points, the nearest they ever came to the Washingtonians.

Sawyer One-Man Team

With Groza, Beard and Paul Walther leading the way they tossed in 12 points and by midperiod cut the Caps lead to 66-54.

During this time Sawyer did his one-man job of keeping the Caps out in front with 11 of the Caps' first 13 points of the period.

By the end of the period, the Olympians had drawn within six points of the Caps, 74-68.

Then the Caps took charge again.

With the rookies, Earl Lloyd, Dick Schnittker, Sawyer, and Bill Sharman parading to the basket, and with some nice help from Don Otten, Ariel Maughan and Frank Kudelka the Caps turned the game into a walkaway as the final period started.

It was a free toss by Kuldelka, with the fans chanting "Make it a hundred, make it a hundred," that put the Caps into the three-figure mark with only 55 seconds remaining.

In winning the Caps pulled up to the .500 mark in the league, having lost their opener in Rochester Tuesday night, 78-70.

Ferrier Cuts Palmer Lead To 1 Stroke

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 1 (AP).—Johnny Palmer clung to his North and South Open golf tournament lead at the halfway mark today, but his margin was halved to a single stroke.

While the Badin, N. C., tournament circuit regular was posting a two-under par 70 for a 135 total after his record 65 of yesterday, Jim Ferrier of San Francisco carded a 69. This, added to his 67 of yesterday, elevated him from a five-way tie for second place into sole ownership of the position.

In third place after 67 today for 137, two strokes back of Palmer, was 42-year-old Mike Turnesa, White Plains, N. Y., professional, who authored one of the day's three holes in one to shoot up into contention.

Fourth place was held at 139 by four players—defending champion Sam Snead, amateur Frank Stranahan and professionals Chuck Klein of San Antonio, Texas, and George Fazio of Washington's Woodmont Country Club.

The 6952-yard No. 2 championship course of the Pinehurst Country Club regained some lost face today after yesterday's first-round firing had all but laid it low. Whereas 35 players bettered par 72 yesterday, only 20 managed the feat today as a realignment of pin positions, moving back of the tees and an occasional breeze combined to make the course tougher.

However, through 36 holes, 31 players were still under par. And there was the matter of those three holes in one—first in the 48-year history of the tournament.

Turnesa made his on the 156-yard ninth shortly after Steve Doctor, Kane, Pa., pro, had turned the trick on the same hole. Doctor could manage no better than 152 for the day, however, and his 152 total did not qualify for the third round.

The other ace came on the 186-yard, well-trapped seventeenth where Harry Dee, assistant to Claude Harmon at the Winged Foot Club in Mamaroneck, N. Y., bagged one for a 69 for the day and a 141 total.

Hot Gets Hot, Wins Laurel Steeplechase

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

LAUREL, Md., Nov. 1.—With the 82 degree temperature setting an all-time record, a 6-year-old named Hot, a luke-warm second choice, ran and jumped his way to victory here today. The son of Teufel, owned by Rigan McKinney, got home five lengths ahead of the closest opposition in the $7500 added Chevy Chase Steeplechase handicap.

Mill River Stable's Monkey Wrench was second and two lengths in front of a photo for third in which Mrs. S. C. Clark, jr's Trough Hill nosed out Isadore Bieber's Semper Eadem. The latter pair, along with Rokeby Stable's Genancoke, comprised the three-horse Trainer J. T. Skinner entry.

Hot paid $5.80 and was clocked for the about 2 miles over 13 jumps in 3:55 2/5. A crowd of 10,218 saw the final program here and the autumn's only steeplechase handicap.

Jockey Frank D. Adams was aboard the winner.

Betting for today was $714,596, the best single afternoon with the exception of Saturday. During the 13-day meeting, 127,730 fans wagered a total of $8,653,209 for a daily average of $665,631.

Last year's average was $661,816.

Fitzrada 2d, Other Area Horses Score

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (AP).—One Pennant, owned by Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry of Cobham, Va., took first in the Working Hunter Hacks (light, middle or heavyweight) division here today in the National Horse Show.

Fitzrada, owned by Col. and Mrs. H. H. Pohl of Leesburg, Va., was second to One Pennant.

Circus Rose, winner of the Open Jumping at the recent Harrisburg, Pa., show, for the Hi-Rock Farm, Warrenton, Va., won tonight's event in a jumpoff with Planet and Injun Joe. Planet gained second on a jumpoff with Injun Joe.

Morton W. Smith's Royal Chief from Middleburg, Va., won the Green Hunters (middle or heavyweight) title, and held fifth place in the green hunters (any weight) competition.

Flying Flag, owned by Mrs. T. Kenneth Ellis of Hot Springs, Va., was fifth in the Other Than Thoroughbreds Hunters (light, middle and heavyweight) class.

Competition was first in the American Bred Hackneys (stallions, mares or geldings) with Constellation third. Both are owned by Mrs. Loula Long Combs of Lees Summit, Md. The two teamed up for first place in the Collection of Three Harness Horses (over 14.2).

Mrs. Combs' Concoction and Concession were fourth in the Pairs of Harness Ponies (not exceeding 14.2).

St. Michael's Takes Lead in CYO

St. Michael's defeated St. Ann's, 14-12, in the feature game of an eight-contest schedule of the Catholic Youth Organization Junior Football League yesterday on the Ellipse.

The victory put St. Michael's on top in Section I with five victories and no defeats. St. Ann's is in second place with four wins and one loss.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

Section I

Thompson, Doyle on Doubtful List

Injuries May Force Hoyas To Use Barba, Cussen 1st Time

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Florida-bound Georgetown is scheduled to fly into the teeth of the Hurricane this afternoon.

Don't get excited, that's only the nickname of the unbeaten University of Miami football team. Pre-game dopesters, however, are inclined to feel that the eighth-ranking unbeaten Miamians will hit the Hoyas with gale-like force.

Georgetown goes into tomorrow night's game a 20-point underdog. With the Hoya backfield depleted, Miamia probably should have more points.

The crusher came yesterday when it was learned that Jack O'Mahoney, brilliant soph prospect, is out for the season with a ruptured kidney suffered in the Villanova game. Art Gulla, who started out as No. 1 left halfback, was sidelined for the year with a spine injury in the Maryland game.

The injuries mean that Soph Jack Cussen and Senior Dick Barba may be pressed into action. Neither has played a minute all season.

Despite the handicapped backfield, there wasn't much gloom at Georgetown yesterday. From Coach Bob Margarita down, the feeling persisted that the Hoyas will give Miami a contest.

A giant pep rally was held on the campus list night. Some 200 students and the school band are taking a special train to Miami for the game.

If Georgetown's football team is going along merely for the ride, it will be a pleasant one at that. The Hoyas' chartered plane leaves National Airport at 1:15 p. m. today.

They'll have a workout in the Orange Bowl tonight, loll around all day Friday before the game and leave Miami 3 p. m. Saturday. They're due to arrive back in Washington about 6:30 p. m.

There's even some beach relaxation scheduled for Saturday morning. If the Hoyas get as bruised as most people expect, they'll need all the soothing sun they can get.

Special Opens Pimlico Friday

LAUREL, Nov. 1.—Fourteenth running of the Pimlico Special on Friday will highlight the opening of the Maryland Jockey Club's annual fall meeting at Pimlico and on Saturday, will come the renewal of the historic Pimlico Cup, thus giving the club two banner attractions for the first two days of the session.

The Special, with a $15,000 prize in which the winner takes all, is at a mile and three-sixteenths while the cup is the longest American stake event, run at two miles and a half.

For the Special, officials are hopeful of a field of five or six, entries close tomorrow morning.

Greentree Stable's One Hitter, the probable favorite, will be seeking a third triumph for that stable in the Pimlico classic.

Rounding out the field could be Palatine Stable's Chicle 2nd., Mrs. E. D. Weir's Royal Governor, maybe Hasty House Farm's Inseparable. Another outside possibility is George D. Widener's Lights Up.

'Turf Club' Planned

New Owner Hopes to Make Laurel Top Flight Track

LAUREL, Nov. 1.—Morris Schapiro, who made his fortune dealing in scrap metal, didn't buy the Laurel race track to junk it. The jovial and sixtyish business man who was disclosed as the purchaser of a controlling interest in the plant yesterday made this plain today while in the role of a spectator at the final program

"We hope to make Laurel one of the Nation's outstanding tracks. Naturally, there will be improvements," he said. "But just where and when we'll start I will not know until after we make a thorough study."

His "we" referred to his son as well as other stockholders. The elder Schapiro revealed that 36-year-old John D. would be president under the new set-up.

Schapiro said that when conditions allowed he planned to build a "turf club" atop the present clubhouse but, he pointed out, that this move toward catering to the upper-crust did not mean that he wasn't interested in the general public.

The new owner of 67 percent of Laurel's stock revealed the present line-up of handicap and stake races would remain with the possibility of others being added. He emphasized that the stake purses would not be reduced.

Mahoney Gets Committeeman Post in Party

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 1.—George P. Mahoney, who lost the Democratic nomination for Governor to Incumbent W. Preston Lane, tonight received and accepted appointment as Democratic National Committeeman to succeed Lane.

The Baltimore contractor first received word of his confirmation at about 9:30 p. m. from Baltimore Mayor Thomas d'Alessandro. The mayor was about to introduce Lane and Mahoney at a political rally of the Young Men's Bohemian Democratic Club in northeast Baltimore.

A telegram from William Boyle, Democratic Committee chairman, caught up with Mahoney later. Mahoney had been certified by Robert B. Ennis, Maryland Democratic Central Committee chairman, for the post.

Mahoney's acceptance came as Lane and Theodore R. McKeldin, Republican candidate for the Governorship, fired new radio blasts at each other in the opening of their final intensive bid for the votes of this key city.

Lane charged that his Republican opponent showed "complete helplessness" as Mayor of Baltimore from 1943 to 1947.

McKeldin countered that Lane as Governor overtaxed the people of Maryland through the sales tax by the "astounding, outrageous sum of 25 million dollars." This apparently referred to excess of collections over original estimates.

Both Lane and McKeldin drew upon the assistance of Mahoney.

Companions at Rallies

Lane took Mahoney with him to a series of night political rallies here. Mahoney and his aides earlier had moved into the Lane headquarters to help in the final week of the campaign.

From a Mahoney statement of August 25:

"We have had at Annapolis one of the greatest spenders and taxers of all time. I say that if this waste and inefficiency continue, Mr. Lane will build his political machine and will fasten the shackles of increasing taxes not only upon ourselves, but upon our children and our children's children."

Political "Boss" Issue

Lane and McKeldin also threw some punches about bosses—with clear reference to factional feuding in the Democratic camp here which resulted in Lane's repudiating the one local leader whose area went to Lane in the primary.

Lane declared, "so long as I am governor, no one man is going to set himself up as bigger and stronger than the people who elected me. One of my convictions is that the Governor of Maryland is responsible only to the people of this State."

McKeldin said that "Mr. Lane is openly the creature of one boss or another at all times, and his only apparent regret is that he does not have all the bosses all the time."

DEAR FOLKS: AT LAUREL

The mere presence of a horse in the Bowie saliva box, where tests are taken to determine if the thoroughbred is stimulated, is enough to give any trainer or owner the jitters. However, the spot apparently holds no terrors for Nellie, a stray dog. She moved in the day after the meeting closed and there was a reason. The other morning a passerby heard strange noises, investigated and found Nellie with a family of eight little Willies and Nellies. The canine matron is living like a queen now with track officials, horsemen and stable help plying her with hot dogs, hamburgers and such. They have renamed her Drug Store and are calling the puppies Procaine, Benzedrine, Caffiene, Ephedrine, Cocaine, etc. If you have uncashed winning Laurel tickets, you may get your money at the Pimlico cashiers. See you on the rail Friday.—BILL

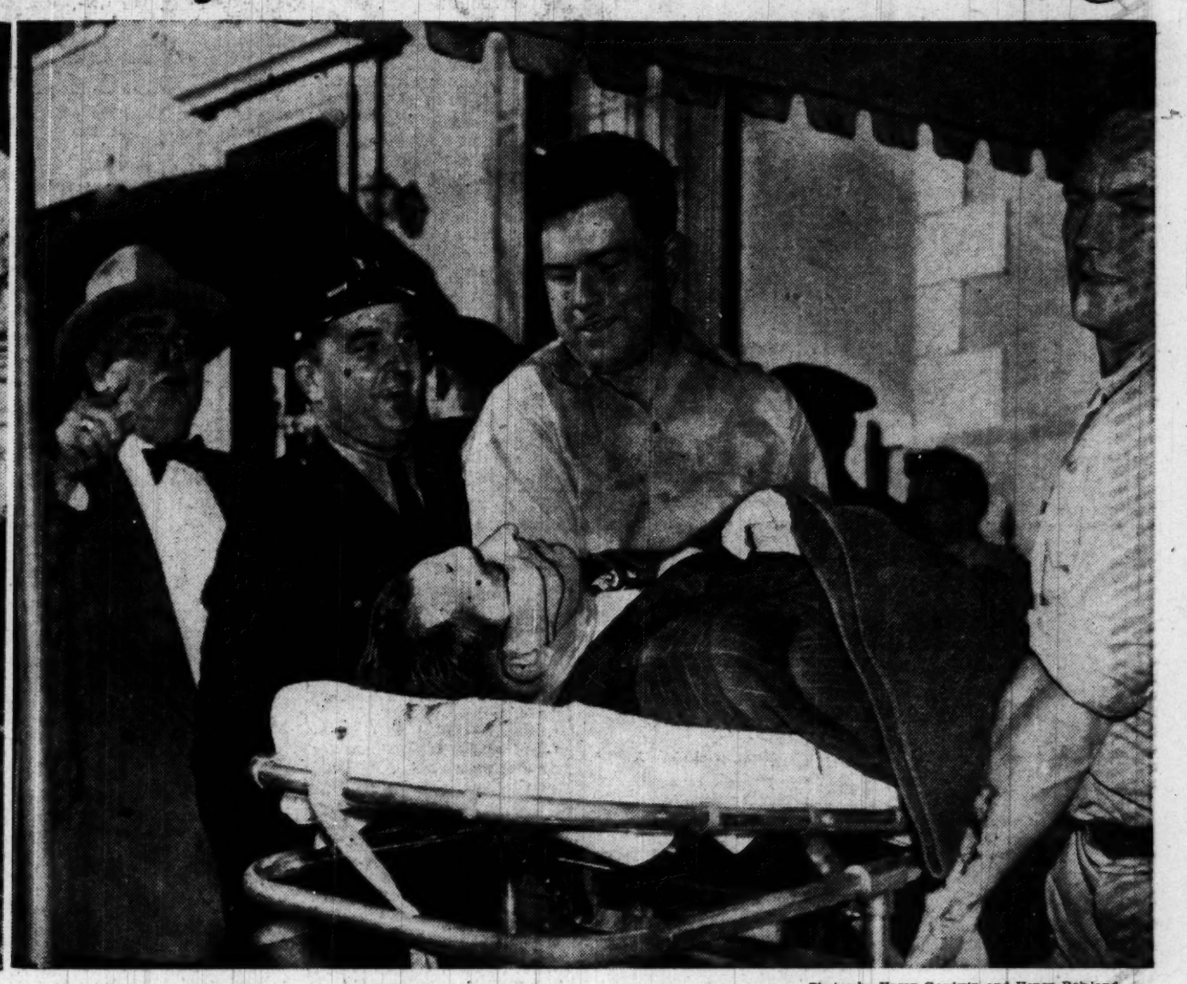
Pictures Show Wild Aftermath of Blair House Shooting

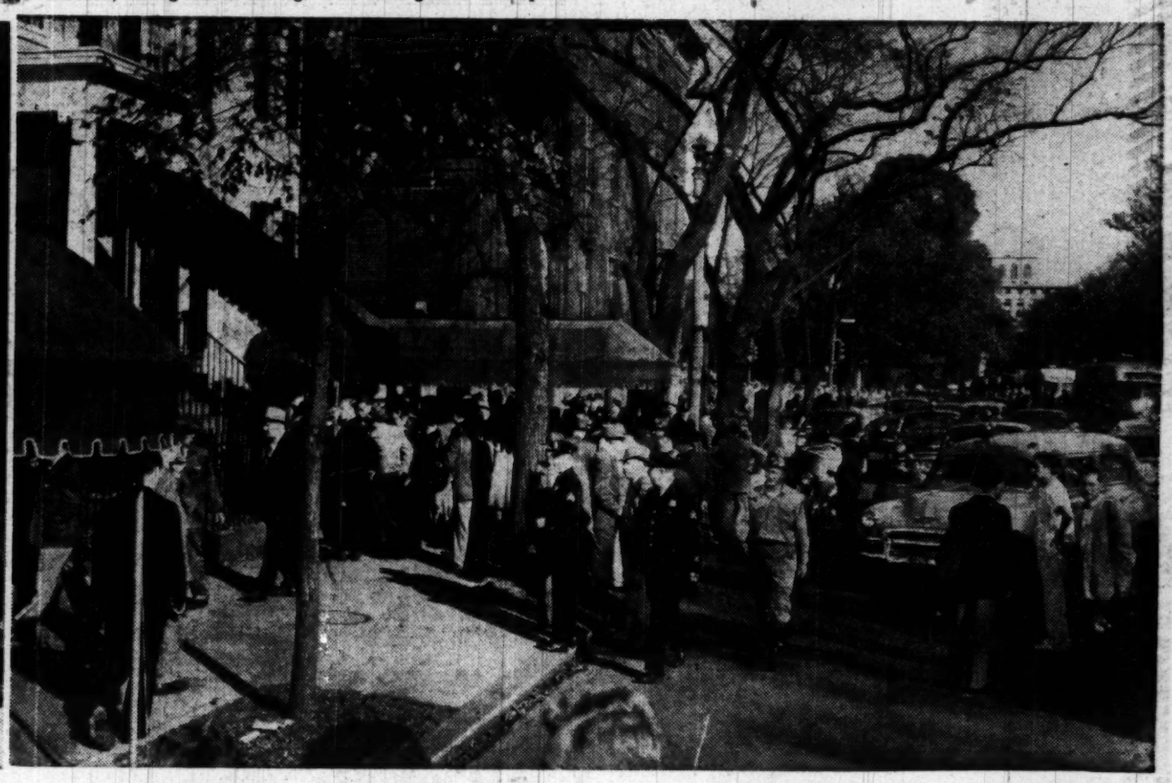
KILLED—The body of Griselio Torresola, one of the two Puerto Rican Nationalists who tried to assassinate President Truman at Blair House yesterday, is placed on a stretcher. In the gun battle, which started about 2:15 p. m., Torresola fatally wounded Pvt. Leslie Coffelt, a White House guard, before he was killed



WOUNDED—Oscar Collazo, the second gunman, began the affray when he opened fire on White House Guard Donald T. Birdzell, hitting him in the leg. Two other guards then opened fire, hitting Collazo in the chest. He is shown being placed on a stretcher in front of Blair House where he had fallen at the foot of the steps

Photos by Harry Goodwin and Henry Rohland

PHOTO DIAGRAM—Shown here is how the assassination attempt on President Truman was carried out in front of the Blair House and the adjoining Blair-Lee House. (A) is where Oscar Collazo opened fire at White House Policeman Pvt. Donald T. Birdzell. Private Birdzell, attempting to draw fire away from the Blair House, backed into Pennsylvania ave. (B). Collazo fell at the foot of the Blair House steps. Birdzell fell wounded in the street. Collazo was hit by a bullet fired by another guard at (C). Meanwhile, the second gunman, Griselio Torresola, was at (D) where he began shooting at Pvts. Leslie Coffelt and Joseph Downs at (E). In the exchange of shots, Torresola fell dead over a hedge at (D)



CROWDS GATHER—Shortly after the shooting spectators began crowding the area in front of Blair House. Police closed the street to traffic, allowing only police cars and ambulances to pass. Ambulances from several of the city's hospitals sped to the scene and the wounded guards and assassins were rushed to Emergency Hospital. Pvt. Leslie Coffelt died at the hospital about four hours later. During the gunplay two slugs penetrated the Whelan drugstore at the corner of Pennsylvania ave. and 17th st. and an elderly woman who walked into the line of fire was snatched from possible harm by one of the hundreds of eye-witnesses.

Woman Reports Heart Attack After Shooting

Emergency Hospital reported that Mrs. Frank (Nellie) Hurd, 1913 Park rd. nw., came via taxi to the hospital for treatment of what she said was a heart attack brought on by the excitement of the Blair House shooting. She said she was still too nervous to talk about it, but that she was a passer-by when the gunfire started.

The hospital said she was given "medication" and referred to her private physician.

LEAVES AFTER SHOOTING—President Truman (A) in a White House car and heavily guarded by Secret Service men, left Blair House shortly after the shooting to attend ceremonies at the unveiling of a statue at Arlington Cemetery. The President's car, followed by the Secret Service, departed from the rear of the building. When the President heard the shots he went to a second-story window and looked out but was waved back by White House guards

WOUNDED GUARD—White House Guard Donald T. Birdzell, shot in both knees, is given aid by White House attaches before being taken to Emergency Hospital. Birdzell was felled in the street as he blasted away at two assassins

Wants to See Truman, Man Goes to Gallinger

A man stopped Det. Sergt. Wilbur R. Coffee, a plainclothesman, at 17th and Pennsylvania ave. nw. about 4 p. m. yesterday and said, "I want to go in and see the President." He was taken to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation.

The man identified himself, police said, as Earl Edward Stuart, alias Chester A. Chmielewski, 43, of 10012 Forest Grove dr., Silver Spring, Md.

Mrs. Mary Chute Dies; Longtime Area Resident

Mrs. Mary A. Chute, 87, died Wednesday at her home, 760 Rock Creek Church rd., after an illness of several months.

Mrs. Chute was the widow of James A. Chute. She was the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Wright. Her first marriage, to Edgar J. Perry, ended with his death.

Born in Lake City, Minn., she came here with her parents 69 years ago, and was a pioneer resident of Takoma Park and a charter member of Petworth Methodist Church, to which she belonged for 40 years. She was for 23 years secretary from her church to the Methodist Home for the Aged.

She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Fred S. Walker, and two granddaughters, Mrs. John C. VanBuskirk of Clarendon, Va., and Mrs. Earl H. Alexander of Kentland, Md., and three great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be at the Huntemann Funeral Home, 5732 Georgia Ave., at 2 p. m. Friday. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

The Washington Post
Program of Information on WORLD AFFAIRS
TEST NO. 4

The Program of Information on World Affairs is sponsored by The Washington Post to promote popular interest in events of world significance. As a part of the program The Washington Post publishes each Thursday of the school year a test on one of 26 topics of world affairs. The Program makes it possible for school children, adult groups and individuals to measure their knowledge of world affairs. It also includes a guidebook with study outlines on the 26 topics. The Program is directed by J. Edward Gerald, University of Minnesota Professor of Journalism, under guidance of Edgar B. Wesley, University Professor of Education.

Answers will be printed in The Post on Saturday. Some of the test questions may involve degrees of correctness rather than indisputable facts. In such cases select the BEST answer.

Widower, 62, Father of Six Children, Receives Marriage Proposal From Widow, 42, Whose Rather Unconventional Past Behavior Is Another Story

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 62, the father of six children, and have been a widower for 3½ years. Four children are married and two are still with me, one in college and one employed. Our present housekeeper is very efficient, and a kinsman has made his home with us for 20 years. He is a good character but his presence has had ill effects on the whole household, causing loss of privacy and limited social life. If I should marry again, I would eliminate this condition.

I am in normally good health for a man my age, and have no chronic ailments. I am financially able to support a wife and have a well furnished home. I am thinking of marrying again, but before going ahead, I want your advice, and I am giving you this data about the girl and myself.

Ann is a widow, 42, whom I first met three years ago, when she was newly married to John, an older man, then recently divorced from his first wife, after 30 years' marriage. I'd known John and his first wife for many years, and her morals were perfect, though his were not—and brought on the divorce, I understand.

John and Ann were companions for a couple of years prior to the divorce, she knowing he was married. And I should say they had an affair during that time, probably utilized by Ann to induce John's divorce and marriage to herself.

It was after her husband's death that I met Ann the second time. I have seen her several times since. She expressed a desire to marry me, doubtless as a result of my saying that my wife's death had left a void in my life,—in the sense that my children don't share my interests, and I don't expect them to. Thus I feel the loss of wifely companionship. However, personal relations at home are entirely satisfactory at present; but if my remaining daughter were to establish her own home, the situation would be quite different.

Should I stay single rather than gamble on successful marriage with Ann? Considering the difference in ages, is it rational to assume that social and sex life would be mutually agreeable, and that a permanently satisfactory marriage is possible? Thanks for any comment you may offer. B. W.

DEAR B. W.: It is not Ann's age, but the motives and purposes back of her proposal, that should concern you as you try to decide whether to marry her. If it is true, as you think, that she deliberately broke up a home a few years ago, by unscrupulously using an affair to take a man from his wife after 30 years' marriage, we may be pardoned for construing that she isn't a kindhearted woman,—hence isn't an appropriate choice of life companion for a fairminded, older man's sunset years.

Bearing in mind her recent go-getter approach to you, plus the tactics you say she employed in corralling John, it is an odd commentary on Ann's character that she remained single until nearly 40—so it seems. I gather John was her first husband, for you don't mention any predecessors, and you speak of her as a girl. In some cases, fixed dedication to lofty principles or a valiant lonely quest for the ideal man, may keep a woman unmarried long past her youth. But in view of Ann's grabby behavior, of recent years, would these explanations apply to her? My guess is no; so here again is a challenge to pause and reflect, and try to understand Ann's make-up, before commiting yourself.

Maybe Ann's life has been warped by an innate conviction that she is unlovable, a feeling that might always have stayed her from trying to find favor with males her own age. And this might account for her expedient alliance with John, if he seemed weakly willing for a fling, just as she was reaching the age of desperation. I refer to the waning thirties, the turning point at which most women, and especially the unmarried, develop great anxiety about the future left to them, and become more urgent and less choosey about their security seeking arrangements, as a rule.

Psychologists tell us that the conviction of being unlovable is akin to the inability to love; that it is indeed, a plain symptom of that incapacity. A person who can be genuinely fond of others will have no doubt that others can be fond of him, a truism that Dr. Karen Horney points up in her writings. The fact that Ann undermined another woman's marriage, and took her husband without apparent misgivings, suggests that she may lack the generosity, compassion, honesty, etc., which animate fine behavior; and thus might be a flinty wife, shallow, selfish and scheming, when the cards were down.

If your present living arrangements are comfortable, with two children at home to check on your welfare, and a kinsman there to make a houseful, there's no reason to jump at Ann's offer. You are a good catch by modern standards—consider the "Veep" and the beguiling Pinza,—so keep your head, and take plenty of time looking around for a second wife. In my opinion, Ann doesn't sound right for you. M. H.

'Pizza' Means Many Things To Italians, but Over Here It's a Spicy Dough Pie

HAVE YOU EATEN "PIZZA"? It's a litle taste of Italy that seems to be appealing to American palates from Maine to California nowadays.

Actually the word "pizza" is general Italian term for pie, tart, or anything round, flat, and baked in the oven. It's made in a dozen forms in Italy. The one that's come to us in the United States is the wheatdough pie of Neapolitans baked with tomato sauce, cheese and/or anchovies.

For the benefit of W. R. M., of Hyattsville, E. R. B., of Washington, and others who have written in for pizza recipes, here is a real Italian one. It features mozzarella cheese, which can be purchased in shops specializing in Italian products and in some other fancy groceries.

PIZZA

Dough: 4 2-3 cups sifted flour
2 tablespoons lard
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon pepper
1¼ envelopes dry yeast
1½ cups warm water

Place flour on pastry board. Add lard, salt, pepper, yeast and warm water and work well until smooth. Place in large pan, cover and let rise in warm place 2 hours or until double in bulk. Place on floured board and pound lightly to deflate it. Divide into two pieces and stretch each on bottom of greased 12-inch pie plate.

Filling: 2 tablespoons olive oil
¼ pound anchovy filets
1 medium can tomatoes
¾ pound mozzarella cheese, sliced thin
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
½ teaspoon oregano

Sprinkle dough covering pans with oil until it is well covered. Place anchovies, tomatoes, and mozzarella cheese all over dough. Add salt, pepper, oregano, and a little more oil and place in hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) for about 20 minutes.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me where I can buy the tops of decanters? I have broken one of a pair and am told it cannot be repaired. Perhaps you know of some place that has or will make extra tops or stoppers?

M. C., Alexandria, Va.

No, I don't know of any place that would make them for you. However, some gift shops sell decorative stoppers to use in bottles. Perhaps searching would turn up a pair that could be used in your decanters.

DEAR ANNE:

I would appreciate it very much if you can tell me what kind of dust cloth to use on furniture so that it will not leave lint.

Phyllis Diana, Arlington, Va.

There are several ways to make "lintless" dustcloths. One is to put a tablespoon of oil furniture polish in an old coffee can, shake it well, then stuff in a large square of fresh cheesecloth. Leave overnight.

Another is to mix ¼ cup oil furniture polish and 1 pint hot water. Into this, dip 4 or 5 cheesecloth squares (20 by 20 inches). Press solution through cloth thoroughly. Squeeze out all excess moisture and dry thoroughly before using.

U. S. Defense Trio Gives Party

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth McGuire

THE SECRETARIES OF the Army, Navy and Air Force gave a party yesterday for Defense Ministers of the NATO countries. It was a grand finale to a fortnight of parties fringing the meetings of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Col. Anthony Drexel Biddle, foreign liaison officer of the Army, received the guests and introduced them to the Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Frank Pace, jr., the Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Thomas K. Finletter and the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Francis P. Matthews. The party was held at Fort McNair Officers Club from 6 to 8 p. m.

Prominent figures in the gathering were the military attaches of NATO embassies. Defense Ministers in whose honor the party was given included Jens Hauge of Norway; H. L. s'Jacob of the Netherlands; Rasmus Hansen of Denmark; Brooke Claxton of Canada; Col. Eugene de Greef of Belgium; Rodolfo Pacciardi and Mrs. Pacciardi of Italy; Emanuel Shinwell of the United Kingdom; Jules Moch of France, and Mrs. Moch, and Col. Fernando Santos Costa of Portugual. Iceland was represented at the party by Mr. and Mrs. Magnus V. Magnusson, and from Luxembourg came Col. Aloyse Jacoby, Army chief of staff.

THE MILITARY GREAT also included Gen. Efisio Marras and Gen. Mario Ajmone-Cat of Italy; Gen. E. Baele and Gen. L. Laboutte of Belgium; Lieut. Gen. E. Goertz of Denmark; Gen. and Mrs. Charles Foulkes, Air Marshal W. A. Curtis and Mrs. Curtis, and Vice Admiral and Mrs. Harold T. W. Grant of Canada; Gen. Maurice Vernoux of France; Marshal Sir William Slim, Royal Air Force Marshal Sir John Slessor, and Lord Bruce Fraser of North Cape, all of Great Britain.

PARTY PARADE

PERLE MESTA—MME. MINISTER to Luxembourg—has been so busy at the State Department since she came back last month that there's been little time for partying.

This week, however, her calendar has filled up and Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward's cocktail party yesterday afternoon will be followed by a series of fetes in her honor until she leaves on Sunday for Newport, where she'll stay until Tuesday to vote.

In a room full of well-dressed women at the party yesterday, none looked smarter than the hostess and the honor guest. Mrs. Mesta's frock of heavy gray lace had a side panel of matching velvet. Her gloves were gray taffeta, her slippers gray satin. Her gray felt beret was dotted with rhinestones, and rhinestones were sprinkled on her half-moon veil.

The Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne were dressed for dinner; so were Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young, who were going later to the National Symphony. The Luxembourg Minister Hugues LeGallais was there, escorting Mme LeGallais in a black taffeta frock with tight draped skirt, a brimmed black hat and silver fox furs over her arm.

EVERYBODY WAS WELCOMING the Leslie Biffles—Mr. Biffle just back from a cross-country pre-election pulse of the Nation tour. Everybody was glad to see the Panama Ambassador and Senora de Herbruger and to meet their Foreign Minister, Dr. Carlos Brin. Dr. Brin, who has been attending special sessions at U. N. spent yesterday visiting old haunts—Western High School where he was a student, and George Washington University Medical School where he got his degree.

THE FINNISH MINISTER K. T. Jutila told me he has signed the lease for 1900 24th st. to be the new chancery. Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister, had her vivacious daughter Margaret with her. And, to go on, there were Mme. Bonnet in Dior's puffed sleeve number, worn with a white beret appliqued in black leaf design sequins; Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Graves, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris; Gen. Conger Pratt, and Mrs. Pratt in dark blue; Mrs. Lawrence W. Robert who brought her poodle, CoCo; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rediker, Mr. and Mrs. James Cromwell, Mrs. Ambrose Diehl, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frank McCoy and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Shears.

ALONG EMBASSY ROW

THE TURKISH AMBASSADOR and Mme. Erkin were hosts at dinner last evening at the embassy. Their guests included Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas G. W. Settle, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Cox, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mrs. George C. Thorpe, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Sheppard, Dr. Samiye Argut and Dr. Ekrem Turan.

THE AMBASSADOR OF CANADA and Mrs. Hume Wrong were hosts to a company of 16 at dinner Tuesday at the embassy in honor of Brooke Claxton, Canadian Minister for National Defense, and Mrs. Claxton.

TRAVEL DEPT.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel W. Bell and their daughter, Miss Kathleen Bell, are spending the week at the Ponte Vedra Club, Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., and will return to Washington on Sunday.

JOSEPH BRENNAN, Counselor of the Irish Embassy, has sailed for home to visit in Dublin and his native Ulster. The family home in Derry is in the six counties which Ireland claims to be wrongfully withheld from her by the British. Mr. Brennan says, however, that he represents all Ireland, as an Ulsterman by birth and rearing, as well as a representative of the Irish Republic.

Mrs. Brennan, also an Ulsterite, is remaining in Washington this trip, to watch over the welfare of five lively children—three sons and two daughters.

Travelling on the S.S. America with Mr. Brennan were Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Meyer of Washington. Mr. Meyer, who has been on duty at the State Department, is to take up new duties abroad.

Will Live in Troy, N. Y.

Maj. Robert H. Hahnemann, USAF, and Mrs. Hahnemann will reside in Troy, N. Y., where Major Hahnemann is an instructor with the ROTC at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, on return from a northern wedding trip. They were married October 14 at the Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland. The bride is the former Miss Imogene Couch, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Couch and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hahnemann of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Bermuda Gets An Eyeful

D. C. Fashions Go Cruising

By Evelyn Hayes

BERMUDA'S SUNNY SKIES and sparkling sands served as the backdrop for the showing Tuesday of these vacation-minded fashions by famous American designers. The resort collection was shipped to the island by Julius Garfinckel & Co., expressly for the benefit show at the Princess Hotel in Hamilton, before hundreds of vacationers and Bermuda residents. Pictured here are three eye-catching styles, modeled by members of the Junior Service League of Bermuda

FOR REALLY BIG EVENINGS—Imagine dancing in this gown under a tropical moon on the deck of a cruise liner, or on the terrace of a resort hotel! Clouds of net form the skirt, topped by a satin bodice with outline of net. Circling the waist and cutting an oblique swath across the skirt is a satin sash of gray and pink, which repeats the colors of the gown. Worn by Mrs. L. Frances Trott of Hamilton, Bermuda

FOR ANY DAY, ANY PLACE, ANY HOLIDAY—A good casual outfit is the stand-by of any vacation wardrobe, and this three-piece costume by Tina Leser fills the part perfectly. Natural color linen makes up the slim skirt with wide buckled waistband, which is topped by a navy blue jersey blouse. With it goes a kimona coat of natural linen, edged in navy to match the jersey top. Worn by Mrs. Llewelyn Gibbon of Bermuda

FOR A SWIM—Ready for a plunge in the pool or in the sea is this brief maillot of black plisse taffeta, with strap tied halter-style about the neck. And after the dip, a Mexican homespun shawl, or "rebozo," with fringed border of Bermuda gold, goes nicely about the shoulders. The swimmer is Mrs. John Hornburg of Bermuda

Mother-to-Be Needs Support For Comfort

Third Day of Betty's Beauty Program

By Ann Lawrence

"MUST I BUY MATERNITY underwear," Betty asked?

The matter of a maternity corset is a problem for the doctor. He must be consulted and his decision followed. Strong and active, Betty did not feel the need of a support for the first few months.

But since round garters were strictly forbidden, as in all pregnancies (they cut circulation if the slightest bit too tight), an inexpensive, very stretchy elastic girdle seemed to be the answer. This not only held the stockings up, but held her figure in a little.

An aching back and a feeling of strain told Betty when nature needed some help. (It's a good idea to have your support ready when you need it.) And although she had dreaded the corset, she soon found it a very dear friend, as her energy quickly increased.

HER SUPPORT WAS MADE to order, quite reasonably, by a firm which sent a trained representative to her home for measurements. The same skilled corsetiere delivered the garment to be sure of proper fit and to show Betty how to wear it. As an added service, she will come to the hospital, after the baby is born, to take Betty's new measurements. When she's well enough to leave the hospital, the corset will have been altered, ready to wear at home during the next important three months. For, to retain a flat stomach, it is well to wear a support both before and after the baby is born. It also keeps the hips from spreading.

Betty still had some really beautiful trousseau lingerie which she was tempted to wear "just this once." But even as she tried it on, she felt the seams pull and decided to put it firmly away, out of reach, to avoid splits and tears. For remember, above-the-waist measurements increase, as well as those below.

MATERNITY LINGERIE is usually bulky and expensive and is really unnecessary. Well-cut rayon or silk jersey panties and slips will stretch along with your figure. Crepe, satin or nylon slips, a size larger than you usually wear, and cut on the bias, will fit to the last moment and can be taken in when you regain your natural proportions. This is an example of "planned economy" which delighted Betty.

Maternity brassieres, however, are a necessity and must be correctly cut to relieve the additional strain. Several manufacturers make them with a series of tucks that may be taken out or put back with the variations in your figure. A maternity brassiere is a "must" unless you want to run the risk of a sagging pendulous bosom which so often needlessly accompanies motherhood.

Woodies' 1st Customer to Star at Opening

By Norma Lanum

A MILESTONE IN the 70-year-history of Woodward & Lothrop's store—"Washington's first department store—will be reached at exactly 12:30 p. m. Friday when the doors on the new "Woodies" in Chevy Chase, Md., open for business.

And in keeping with the historic event Mrs. Margaret C. L. Welsh, a 94-year-old Rockville clubwoman who was Woodward & Lothrop's first customer in 1881, will be on hand to make the first purchase in the new sister store, which is at Wisconsin and Western aves.

Mrs. Welsh was lured into the Boston Dry Goods House, as "Woodies" was known then, by a bold unconventional sign across the store at the old 921 Pennsylvania ave. location. The sign proclaimed: "ONE PRICE."

BUT IT WILL BE a different story at the store she'll visit Friday. The spacious three-floor suburban store, with 70,000 square feet of selling space will be stocked with all the large variety of goods that the main branch carries.

Friday's opening is the climax of a three-day celebration. Yesterday morning store officials, headed by Andrew Parker, president, entertained members of the press at a breakfast and tour of the modern building.

And last evening store officials were hosts to all Woodward and Lothrop's employes at a reception in the building's auditorium, attended by thousands of the store's staff and their families.

TODAY THERE WILL BE a luncheon in the store's auditorium for officials and guests, with John Tyssowski, chairman of the board of directors, presiding. Andrew Parker, president of the company, will deliver the main address, after which A. Lothrop Luttrell, executive vice president, will introduce the guests, among them civic leaders of Bethesda and nearby communities. Philip M. Talbott, senior vice president and secretary, will sketch the history and growth of Woodward and Lothrop in his address, following the introduction of guests.

The official opening of the store will be at 4 p. m. this afternoon, with Mr. Tyssowski presiding. At this time Mrs. Welsh will be introduced, and presented a corsage by Mr. Parker. Then these two will officially open the doors of the new store, which will be open for inspection at this time.

Before the opening for business on Friday a program for suppliers of the store will be held, including a tour of the store and an address by Donald Buckingham, vice president in charge of merchandising.

AT 12:30 FRIDAY the store will be ready to greet customers, but there will be still another event to mark the opening. On Saturday a transportation pageant featuring some of the old cars which were popular throughout the history of Woodward & Lothrop, will be held on the parking space of the store. A 1904 Rambler, 1913 Detroit electric sedan and 1922 Stanley Steamer will be among the old cars on display.

WOODWARD AND LOTHROP department store officials were hosts to employes at a reception last evening at the new branch store in Chevy Chase, Md. Here A. Lothrop Luttrell (left), executive vice president of the store, and Andrew Parker, president, get their refreshments from Mrs. May Reed, a credit department employe it's YOUR HUSBAND!

AND WE'LL GIVE YOU YOUR MONEY BACK IF HE DOESN'T AGREE MAXWELL HOUSE IS THE BEST HE EVER TASTED!

We're in the coffee business—so naturally we think we're experts. But there's another coffee expert who's the final judge . . . your husband! And we're making this money-back offer because we know Maxwell House has the hearty goodness he'll like best.

It's the one coffee with that "Good to the Last Drop" flavor, because it's the one coffee made according to the one-and-only Maxwell House recipe. That recipe insists on certain fine coffees blended a special way to bring you coffee at its rich, flavorful best!

No other coffee is made like Maxwell House! That's why no other tastes like Maxwell House! Try it on your husband and see!

GO TO YOUR GROCER TODAY! MAKE THIS MONEY-BACK TEST TONIGHT!

Buy a pound of Maxwell House Coffee. Serve it to your husband for five days. If he doesn't agree Maxwell House is tops, return the can with the unused portion to us, and tell us what you paid for the coffee. Your purchase price will be cheerfully refunded by return mail. Address Maxwell House, Box 209, New York 46, New York. Offer closes midnight, November 24, 1950.

Transit Ballot Slated Dec. 12 On Stock Split

By S. Oliver Goodman

Directors of Capital Transit Co. yesterday set December 12 for the special meeting at which stockholders will vote on the proposal to split stock four-for-one.

Stockholders of record November 14 will be entitled to vote if two thirds of the outstanding shares approves of the split, the plan will then be presented to the Public Utilities Commission and any other public agency claiming jurisdiction.

As announced originally, the outstanding 240,000 shares of $100 par stock would be changed to 960,000 shares of $25 par stock if the director's recommendation is approved.

The split proposal, a company spokesman explained, was made "in order to increase public interest in the company by widening the stockholding as well as broadening the trading base, thus increasing the marketability of the stock."

Capital Transit stock was quoted yesterday on the New York Curb and Washington Stock Exchange at $35 a share.

NEW HEADACHE: All stockholders, for the first time, will be required to list dividends they receive "by companies" on their 1950 Federal income tax returns. The new Form 1040 has just been completed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. This new requirement is the Bureau's answer to the failure by Congress to impose withholding taxes on dividend payments at the source. The old form required that dividends be listed in one lump sum.

ODD LOTS: Hotel Statler Co., Inc., will increase authorized shares of $10 per capital stock from 1,318,451 to 1,700,000. . . . The Paraffine Companies, Inc., henceforth will be known as Pabco Products, Inc. . . . American Airlines reported that revenue passengers out of National Airport here in October were 30 percent more than in same 1949 month and set a new monthly record. . . . Kaiser Steel Corp. yesterday handed over a $91,476,989 check to the RFC, repaying the last of the $123,305,000 borrowed to build a steel plant at Fontana, Calif., during World War II.

RIGHTS: Yesterday's over-the-counter market in warrants of Government Employes Corp., auto finance firm, was quoted as $18 bid and $20 asked. The rights entitle owner to purchase one share of the firm's stock at $10. Government Employes Corp. stock, ex-rights, was quoted around $30 a share. The additional offering consists of 30,000 shares and proceeds will be used by the Washington firm to finance further growth of the business which began lending operations on January 13, 1950.

CONFERENCE: Bank personnel officers will learn about two new courses at an area American Institute of Banking conference here Friday in the Mayflower Hotel. They are an orientation course for newcomers in banking and a course in supervisory management. The meeting will be combined with the AIB's annual inter-chapter faculty conference. Stephen O. Porter is chairman of the arrangements committee.

RECORD PROFITS: How large profits have been in the September quarter was shown in a compilation by the Associated Press released yesterday. Corporation profits are running at a record high rate—51 percent higher than in the September quarter last year despite the fact that the great majority of companies deducted the recently enacted corporate tax increase. Final results may be whittled down when and if Congress approves a retroactive excess profits tax. Even so, the figures made pleasant reading for stockholders.

WHO'S NEWS: Melvin W. Marques, deputy register of wills, will address the Fiduciaries Section of the D. C. Bankers Association at a dinner meeting November 8 in the Willard Hotel . . . Frank E. Weakly and Herbert C. Blunek, both of Washington, have left for Detroit to attend the annual convention of the American Hotel Association . . . J. Don Parel has been appointed manager of agricultural relations in the public relations department of the Association of American Railroads . . . Continental Can Co. announced the promotion of J. S. Snelham to vice president in charge of finance and G. L. Barry to comptroller.

EARNINGS: Commercial Credit Co. reported net income of $16,114,998 or $7 a common share for the first nine months, compared with $12,574,919 or $6.46 a share in the same 1949 period. Other earnings statements on a per-share basis follow:

Hero's Twins Get Truman's Attention

Twin Babies Spar With Truman As Father Gets Medal of Honor

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Twins Peter and Paul Chambers, aged 7 months, sparred with President Truman in the White House rose garden yesterday.

The playful scene completely stole the show from the boys' Marine hero father.

Col. Justice Marion Chambers, U.S.M.C.R. (Ret.) of Rockville, Md., had come to the White House to receive the country's highest award—the Medal of Honor—for "conspicuous" gallantry at Iwo Jima.

"For conspicious gallantry . . . above and beyond the call of duty" at Iwo Jima, the President began solemnly.

Peter reached from the arms of his 17-year-old sister, Patrica, and grabbed one of the sheets of the citation. He shook it violently.

Mr. Truman read on haltingly, as he gently fended off the chubby little hand. The twins were shifted: Peter to mother's arms and Paul to Patrica who was at the President's shoulder.

The photographers went wild. And Paul didn't disappoint them. He had an act, too.

Paul lunged for Mr. Truman's handkerchief, managing to pull it partly from the President's breast pocket. Mr. Truman held the would-be hijacker's hand until the ceremony was over.

Later in a picture-posing session, Mr. Truman balked at photographers' repeated requests for him to hold the twins' hands.

"They don't seem to like too much of this," said the President. "I don't want to make them cry."

Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall — looking on with Navy Secretary Francis Matthews and Gen. C. B. Cates, Marine Corps commandant — was concerned about the colonel's 8-year-old son, Mike.

Twice during the picture taking, Mike seemed to become hidden behind the grownups.

"Get that young man out where he can be seen. Those pants are too nice to hide," Marshall commented quietly. Mike wore a freshly pressed long pants, blue suit.

Colonel Chambers, 42, and now staff adviser for the Senate Armed Services Committee, is a product of Washington's Fifth Battalion of Marine Reserves.

He commanded the Third Battalion, Twenty-third Marine Regiment, in the Iwo Jima landing. He won the Silver Star at Tulagi where he was wounded. He was again wounded at Saipan but returned to command his unit on Tinian. He earned a Legion of Merit there. Chambers is a native of Huntington, W. Va.

Raid Shelter Survey Set For Schools

District school buildings designated in World War II as bomb shelters will be surveyed to determine if they are appropriate for use in atomic warfare.

The Board of Education yesterday gave city officials permission to inspect the buildings as part of a survey of all previously used air raid shelters.

Board members also authorized a committee of public and parochial school teachers and officers to draw up a manual explaining what individuals should do in case of attack.

The guide was requested by Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young for distribution to the general public as well as all schools and colleges.

Miss Katherine Scrivener and Mrs. Alice W. Elam, directors of curriculum, were named cochairmen of the 12-man committee.

During the meeting Board President C. Melvin Sharpe brought out that the board in closed session had considered "the conduct" of Dr. Walter E. Hager in his administration of Wilson Teachers College.

Sharpe said "certain matters had been brought before the board indicating that Dr. Hager was not in absolute command of the college." He refused further comment.

Sharpe made the statement during a debate on whether Dr. Hager, president of the college, should be granted an eight-day leave of absence to attend a meeting of the UNESCO sponsored International Universities Conference in Nice, France, in December. The leave finally was approved.

Court Asked To Enjoin Military

District Court was petitioned yesterday to enjoin the military authorities from declaring Guy's Place, a restaurant night club at 531 8th st. se., off limits to service personnel.

The suit was brought by Guy P. Interdonato, the proprietor. He said that his business has been cut two-thirds ever since Armed Forces Police were posted outside his cafe near the Navy Yard to keep servicemen out.

Interdonato said that the off-limits decree was placed without ever affording him a hearing. He declared that the only evidence was based on a "corrupt" complaint that servicemen contracted a venereal disease from a woman who came to his restaurant.

Judge Alexander Holtzoff refused a temporary restraining order, saying that he would not interfere with military "discipline."

$2300 Bracelet Stolen, Sen. Pepper Reports

HONG KONG (Wednesday), Nov. 1 (AP).—Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) reported today a $23000 bracelet was stolen last night from Mrs. Pepper at their hotel room.

The Senator and Mrs. Pepper, who are returning from a visit to the Middle East by way of the Orient, said the bracelet contained 17 sapphires, 12 diamonds and 8 other stones.

Walter Winchell . . . In New York

Memos to the Editor

A great group of distinguished Americans have organized to give The Big Lie technique used by the Communists the recognition it deserves. The recognition compelled by the world-wide rattles of a global rattlesnake . . . They have discovered silence is no answer to Communistic lies because the Communists construe it and use it—as a confession of guilt . . . The United States group is taking big ads all over the world titled: "The Big Truth."

This reporter welcomes his new allies in the fight . . . If 15 long years against Goebbels and Ciano and five furious ones against Vishinsky, Ehrenburg and Radio Moscow qualify a man to give advice to newcomers, this is it: Diplomatic footwork isn't worth a damn, and if you stand on your dignity, you will be carried up the aisle . . . It is more than toe to toe . . . If necessary, it is heel to heel . . . The only rule totalitarians recognize is the thumb-in-the-eye.

Knowing that an intelligence service can never answer back—the Moscow Radio is currently lambasting J. Edgar Hoover and the FBI . . . On a world-wide basis they are interpreting Hoover's professional silence as a confession of the truth of their absurd charges . . . This is the way you club them with the facts: The Moscow New Times recently reported: "J. Edgar Hoover is the factual head of the entire police espionage system of the United States."

The fact: The local cop on the corner has more authority than J. E. Hoover. The reason: Because under the United States Constitution police powers are reserved specifically to the States themselves. The FBI is restricted by law to merely making findings of fact and those only on Federal matters.

Lie No. 2: From the same Moscow New Times: "Napoleon referred to the famous spy Schulmeister as a 'man of destiny.' This was Wall Street's opinion of J. Edgar Hoover. At the age of 26, his career was assured."

The Fact: G-Man Hoover's career was so "assured" by Wall Street that at the age of 55 his net worth is so low that he will be dependent on his pension for his old age . . . Mr. Hoover's house in Washington is mortgaged or he couldn't own it . . . His average life-time earnings are less than $7500 a year . . . That's a fifth of what executives get in private business (handling an organization of comparative size) and his savings are nil . . . That's some financial position for "The Darling of Wall Street"!

Lie No. 3: "Hoover saw to it that his thugs were given the broadest power, or rather, enjoyed unlimited opportunity for the commission of violence."

The Fact: There is no single record of the FBI ever having employed the 3d degree . . . However, American criminals wish fervently there were FBI horror chambers, since hundreds of them are in jail because the FBI relies on the evidence—instead of the club.

Lie No. 4: Via Radio Moscow: "On the conclusions arrived at by Hoover's G-men more than 135,000 Americans have been imprisoned, men and women whose sole crime was that they dared criticize the reactionary policy of the United States ruling classes."

The Fact: Including such leading progressives as murderer John Dillinger and kidnaper Bruno Hauptmann and evangelistic reformer Pretty Boy Floyd, who like Josef Stalin, chose a career of crime as a means of social advance.

Lie No. 5: Moscow New Times: "No country is so infested with sleuths as the U.S.A. No people so subjected to prying and spying."

The Fact: FBI special agents average less than 1 per 30,000 population . . . In Communist countries the secret police average 11 per 1000! . . . As to the "prying and spying" there are 12,000 Russian agents in the United States right now and less than 200 FBI wiretaps! . . . In short, even if you are a Communist agent, it is 60 to 1 that your wire isn't being tapped by the G-Men . . . Thanks to the American hysteria AGAINST hysteria!

After the FBI collected the devastating evidence against Russian agent Gubitchev—and after an American jury convicted him and an American judge sentenced him to 15 years—the President's Cabinet "diplomatically" reconsidered the matter . . . On the recommendation of Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Gubitchev was allowed to return to Russia . . . The Russian Ambassador in Washington had "let it be known" that the Kremlin "would look favorably" upon it. Mr. Acheson's staff later said they took that to mean "Vogeler might be released" . . . But appeasement paid off as usual . . . Radio Moscow replied as follows: "In the end, when it was perfectly clear that the whole trumped-up case against Gubitchev by the FBI had fallen through, he was sentenced to 15 years. But the judge revealed how unfounded were the charges when he ordered Gubitchev to leave for the USSR within two weeks . . ."

That is the Kremlin's way of notifying the United States Cabinet their Gubitchev parole is construed as a confession of guilt by the United States!

Att'n, Detroit Times: The blast against the National Cancer Hospital of America (offices in Detroit) on last Sunday's broadcase has them screaming in agony . . . I was quoting the Attorney General of New York . . . He will confirm the attack any edition by applying for an injunction to stop that group from soliciting funds in New York on the ground that it "is a fraud against the public" . . . They used the dollar bill method in letters—requesting it be returned with a donation . . . This Ponzi pyramid totaled $1,010,728 in the past 10½ months . . . The Attorney General's audit will show none of the actual contributions (about $600,000) has gone toward the creation of the National Cancer Hospital of America, except a $10,000 deposit on the purchase of a vacant lot in Detroit. This transaction was made late in September when they learned a probe was under way . . . And get this: A direct mail firm in N. Y. (which put up the original $2000 for the one-dollar letters shill) was paid $219,000 for "mailing expenses and commissions" . . . That's over 1000 percent in less than a year!

The Broadway Betting Commissioners, as they prefer being called, do not bet on a candidate because they like him . . . Or because he is clean, clever or capable . . . They are only interested in his chances of winning, because that is the way they make a living . . . Tax free, too . . . They invest their money on information gathered from "experts" all over the land . . . The odds on Taft, for instance, are based chiefly on this sort of info . . . Taft who was 2½ to 1 is now 6 to 5 to win over Ferguson in Ohio, according to the gamblers, who hear that "labor is really organized against Taft in Ohio" . . . In the N. Y. Mayoralty race the same gamblers report that as of late yesterday afternoon Impellitteri money made him a slight favorite.

Dr. Lindstrom Wins Divorce From Ingrid

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Dr. Peter Lindstrom was granted a divorce today from Actress Ingrid Bergman.

Dr. Lindstrom

He testified the movie beauty dashed off to a romantic rendezvous with Roberto Rossellini a few weeks after she had agreed to have another baby by him.

"Our life was happy until my wife went to Italy," he said. "The last thing she did before she left was to select wallpaper for a new nursery in our home.

Superior Judge Thurmon Clark granted Lindstrom the divorce without specifying any grounds.

Judge Clark also approved a property agreement, dividing an estimated $250,000 between Ingrid and Lindstrom, and another settlement giving them joint legal custody of their daughter Pia.

Piano Playhouse

Small Program Has A Large Audience

—By John Crosby—

ONE OF THE MOST inconspicuous little radio programs anywhere on the air and one of the pleasantest is Piano Playhouse which you'll find on the full ABC network (2:30 p. m., WMAL, Sundays). This small program, simply a half hour of piano music, has an audience which will surprise the daylights out of you. Besides being broadcast all over this country, Piano Playhouse is heard in Japan, London, Rome, Australia, South America, Asia, Africa, the Far East and on the Armed Forces network all over the world. It even has a sponsor in Alaska.

Crosby

Piano Playhouse gets letters from the four corners of the globe, including Iron Curtain countries. It is supposed to reach an audience of 10 million persons, though, of course, it's pretty hard to make any sort of accurate guess. The regular pianists on the program are Cy Walter and Stan Freeman, two well known names in the plush New York saloons, and they play as a two-piano team both concert and popular music in about even quantities. Guests have included some of the world's best pianists—Jesus Maria Sanroma, Abram Chasins, Eugene List, Andor Foldes, Teddy Wilson, Art Tatum, to name only a few. The comment is provided by Milton Cross, who practically owns the field of music commentary.

Pretty Maggy Fisher, who owns the show, explains that all pianists are happy to get on her little show because it's one way to get a national and international audience without going on tour. And pianists, like comedians, want the largest audience they can get. Only two pianists have declined and both of them did so only because their feelings were hurt at not being asked sooner. All visiting pianists get the same amount of money, $1000. They team up in all sorts of unusual combinations as duos, trios and quartets. (Piano Playhouse has also presented the Philharmonic Quartet.)

Miss Fisher thinks the popularity of her little show, which will be 7 years old come December 11, was inevitable. "After all," she says, "the piano is the world's most popular instrument. It has been estimated that 1 out of every 10 homes has one." During the war, when GIs were polled on their favorite programs, Piano Playhouse surprised everyone by showing up fourth on the list.

I WAS TALKING to my friend Robert Mainwaring, a Scarsdale man who keeps his finger on the Westchester pulse for me, and he was very upset about the color television controversy. "You know what this color thing is going to do, don't you?" he announced belligerently. "It's going to drive the folks right back into the saloons. We just got the people out of the saloons and back into their own homes, so many of them having their own sets now.

"Well, the barrooms are all going to install color television and everyone will go trooping back, drinking more than is good for them and staying up too late."

He tossed off his scotch and water, ordered another and continued morosely: "All that visiting back and forth. We got that to do all over again, too. The first man with a color set is going to have all the neighbors in 50 miles on his neck, eating up his food and drinking up his whisky. It's socially deplorable. Instead of RCA suing CBS, the people ought to be suing."

Some Second Thoughts On Halloween

Some reporter who has the time to do a comprehensive research job ought to investigate what's been happening recently in the matter of celebrating All Saints' Day.

First, our Halloween shenanigans on the eve of All Saints' Day extended our observance of that holiday to two days.

Then parents organized a conspiracy of parties, slyly designed to keep the kids indoors and off the streets.

The kids, slier still, accepted the parties but organized Trick-or-Treat forays for the night before Halloween.

In some areas, this became known as "Beggar's Night." But wherever the term spread, the small fry pounced on it with high glee and decreed that it was separate and distinct from Trick-or-Treat Night—adding still another day to the celebration. Back home, we used to start the whole sequence with "Gate Night," which covered a multitude of sins, including the filching of a great variety of movable property.

The passing years may have warped my viewpoint, but it appears to me that we have now evolved such a series of "nights" that it's probably time to set an arbitrary limit, and agree that the celebration of Halloween should be confined to one week.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Good watchdog, 7 months old, mixture boxer and shepherd." (Falls Church 1766.)

"Female cocker. AKC registered, gentle with children." (Hudson 9740.)

"Do you have an empty doghouse and heart? I have a sweet male dog who needs both." (Falls Church 7582.)

"Housebroken 3-month-old kittens." (Glebe 2866.)

"Will deliver darling 9-week-old kittens." (Oliver 0073.)

"Two-year-old cocker, wonderful friend." (Wisconsin 1402.)

THIS IS WASHINGTON

Printer Adolph Majower of 1631 Euclid st. nw. was setting a news story on one of the linotype machines in our composing room the other day when he came to an address in the 4900 block of Leroy pl.

"That's got to be wrong," mused Adolph. "Leroy pl. is off Connecticut, it's just one block long, and that one block is 2100, not 4900."

A check of the city directory revealed that Majower and the story were both right. There's another Leroy pl.—miles away—in American University Park. And it's also one block long. The 4900 block.

COPS ARE PEOPLE, TOO

Frank H. Briganti of 4623 49th st. nw. has high praise for a Thirteenth Precinct policeman who shall remain unidentified in this story—because it's just barely possible he might get in dutch with his superiors.

The policeman came looking for District Liner Briganti with a warning that he'd better settle up for a parking ticket, or a warrant would be issued. The violation: Parking in a No Standing zone on 9th st. at 5:20 p. m.

"But that couldn't have been me," protested Briganti. "I didn't leave my office at Gravelly Point until 5:15."

"Hmmm," said the cop. "What kind of a car do you drive?"

"A Pontiac."

"The ticket lists a Chrysler. Well — I'm not infallible. Let's forget the whole thing."

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

If newscasters who mispronounce the name of Senator Estes Kefauver will take the trouble to check with the gentleman from Tennessee, they'll learn that he puts the accent on the first syllable. Like this: KEEF-aw-ver.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

In reference to cab drivers getting "chiseled," let me say that when one person rides four zones the fare is 90 cents but when two share the cab it's 50 cents each, or a total of $1.

Another thing: I have two small children and occasionally take them to my mother's place—a distance of 8 blocks. But the trip crosses a zone line, and when I paid the driver 60 cents the other day, he insisted it should be 90. What is the rule? I think hackers try to take advantage of women in cases like this.

R. M. Nuckols,
834 Hemlock ct. nw.

Dear Mrs. Nuckols:

Regarding your first point, what you say is true. But we were talking about one passenger going four zones and the other passenger only one zone. The group fares are 50 cents and 20 cents respectively—a loss for the hacker.

The rule on children is that if they are 5 years of age or less, and are carried in the arms of an adult, there is no charge (for as many as you can carry). If the child occupies a seat which might otherwise accommodate a paying passenger, you've got to pay for him.

If your children are under 5, and were carried, you owed for one fare only—50 cents for two zones. If neither child qualified under the free rule, you owed 90 cents. If one did and the other didn't, you owed 60 cents.

TURNABOUT

Alice Roosevelt Longworth, who was married in a White House ceremony back in the days when "that other Roosevelt" was President, tells this story about her trip West this summer.

Princess Alice was roughing it in a log cabin, far from civilization, when a virus infection struck. With no doctor available in the vicinity, her condition grew worse at such an alarming rate that she hustled back East for medical attention.

When it was all over and she told Edna Ferber about the experience, Miss Ferber exclaimed:

"Just think of what the headline writers would have done with the story if you'd have died out there, Alice. I can see it now: 'From White House to Log Cabin'."

Ohio Is Crucial Stand for GOP

By Drew Pearson

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—The hot and hectic Ohio senatorial campaign has now boiled down to a battle of labor versus capital, the farm belt versus the city. This class-warfare angle is unfortunate, because the issue goes much deeper and involves the future leadership of the Republican Party.

Senator Taft

The Ohio race is not merely a race between a hard-hitting GOP Senator who had the courage to espouse the Taft-Hartley Act; and a nice but colorless Democrat who champions labor. Actually the issue is also whether the Republican Party is to become once more the progressive party of Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt, or whether it is to lapse back to the international creed of the McKinleys and the Herbert Hoovers.

The fact that this basic issue is not defined in the Ohio senatorial race is partly the fault of the Truman high command. For the truth is that Truman's political advisers originally wanted Taft to win. They figured that he would be much easier to beat than Eisenhower in the race for the White House in 1952; therefore, it was better not to run a strong Democrat against Taft this year.

But whereas the White House failed to grasp the basic issue in Ohio, Arthur Vandenberg, who worked beside Taft for years, grasped the issue long ago. So did Senators Ives of New York, Morse of Oregon, Aiken of Vermont, Tobey of New Hampshire, Smith of Maine, and other Republicans who believe that their party cannot remain isolationist, must be made more progressive.

Vandenberg once summarized this to me during the height of the first intra-party battle over the Marshall Plan.

'Carries Isolationists'

"Taft is so able, so tireless and so headstrong," said the Senator from Michigan, "that he carries the McCarthys, the Malones, the Jenners and the Kems right along with him. That pack of isolationist jackals meets with Taft almost every night to plot against me and the Marshall Plan. I am not sure whether I can lick them."

Vandenberg did lick them in that particular fight. The Marshall Plan, which had more to do with defeating European communism than any other factor, was passed.

But Vandenberg is old and sick now. He makes no pretense of trying to hold a whip hand over the "pack of isolationist jackals" whom he used to lick when it came to crucial votes on the bipartisan foreign policy.

And this year the so-called "pack of isolationist jackals" has been crying communism all over the country, despite the fact that their own votes on foreign policy have gone right down the line with pro-Communist Congressman Marcantonio. This group has used the technique of shouting so loudly about Communists at home that the reverberations have obscured their own pro-Communist votes on policies abroad.

This again is where the Truman high command has not played its cards well. In Indiana, for instance, the issue has become not communism, but Truman versus GOP Senator Capehart. Wisely, the Republicans played down the communism issue in Indiana because in that State the Democrat running against Capehart is Alex Campbell, the forthright former Assistant Attorney General who ordered the prosecution of Alger Hiss, the 12 Communist leaders in New York, Harry Bridges and various others.

In California, however, where GOP Congressman Nixon is running for the Senate, the GOP strategists have pounded home the Communist issue to a farethewell. For Nixon, as a member of the un-American Activities Committee, hounded Hiss; and this has been played up so adroitly that it covers up Nixon's Marcantonio votes on such things as Korea and military aid under the North Atlantic pact.

Likewise in Ohio, Taft's Marcantonio votes have now been pretty well obscurred in the melee over the Taft-Hartley Act. Also forgotten is his private encouragement of Senator McCarthy's spy-hunt at a time when Taft frankly admitted to other Republicans that he "didn't think Joe had anything."

Attack on Marshall

Not quite forgotten in Ohio, however, is Taft's more recent attack on General Marshall when Marshall was appointed Secretary of Defense. This hurt Taft, and his friends are hoping it will be completely forgotten.

Actually the attack on Marshall was a flare-up of the real Taft—the Taft who is absolutely sincere and honest in believing that we can have no bipartisan foreign policy, that we cannot get along with Europe, and that the isolationists rantings of the Chicago Tribune should be the foreign-affairs platform of the Republican Party.

Taft's personal philosophy was quite accurately expressed at an overseas writers' dinner not long before Korea, where, after some amazing statements that the United States was best defended by two oceans, Taft was asked by Barnet Nover of the Denver Post:

"Then you think, Senator, that we would be better off fighting Russia without any allies at all."

"Yes," replied the Senator from Ohio, "I guess that's about it."

Shortly thereafter, when Korea was invaded, Taft publicly reversed himself. He issued a statement clamoring for more allies to help us fight communism.

But Taft's original isolationist thinking, plus his ability, his courage and his indefatigable energy is why he always carries the Kems, the Wherrys, the Jenners, the Malones, the Capeharts and the other GOP isolationists with him. Together they form a compact and powerful unit which guides one wing of the Republican Party.

And that is why the basic issue in the current Ohio race is actually whether the Republican Party will become more isolationist or more progressive in the future.

Strictest secrecy precautions in diplomatic history were invoked to guard the meeting of the 12 Atlantic Pact defense ministers and their military chiefs of staff. . . . On the day before the first meeting in the huge Government auditorium on Constitution ave., 20 FBI men and special Army counterintelligence agents scoured every nook and cranny for hidden microphones and wiretaps. . . . They even looked into the huge chandeliers that light up the conference room to see if the Communists had secreted microphones in them. As an extra precaution, nearly 100 military policemen with fixed bayonets were assigned to guard the building.
